KENTUCKY LAKE BRIDGE COLLAPSE

Circumstances unclear

BY DAVE BOUCHER
NEW ERA STAFF WRITER

Details are still murky surrounding the wreck that sent a 322-foot span of a bridge crashing into Kentucky Lake.

Seattle-based Foss Maritime owns and operates the Delta Mariner, the 312-foot vessel that struck Eggner's Ferry Bridge at approximately 8:15 Thursday evening, said company spokesman Sam Sacco. Foss Maritime and the U.S. Coast Guard are conducting independent investigations into the incident, Sacco said, but the facts are still fuzzy.

"Exactly why it happened — I don't know," Sacco said. He continued: "(Whether) it was river conditions, human error or mechanical failure, we just don't know."

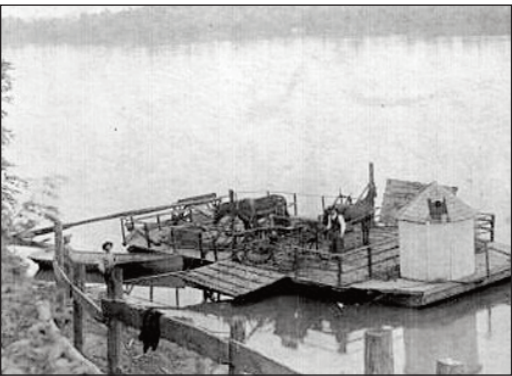

No injuries were reported, and the four cars traveling on the bridge at or near the time of the crash were able to stop before they reached the collapsed section, confirmed Trigg County Judge-Executive Stan Humphries. Engineers at the scene believe

History of Eggner's Ferry Bridge

Eggner's Ferry Bridge was opened and dedicated on March 5, 1932.

Prior to that, crossings over the Tennessee River were by way of a ferry operated by Frank P. Eggner or members of his family.

Records indicate the ferry was operating during the Civil War, as a general referenced having crossed on Eggner's Ferry in his writings.

The first ferry was the Pentecost Ferry, one of the earliest ferries in use on the Tennessee River.

Race set for lone Trigg seat

BY DAVE BOUCHER
NEW ERA STAFF WRITER

CADIZ, Ky. — Although there's only one countywide seat up for debate for Trigg County residents this year, that does not mean the area won't see its fair share of change when it comes to elected officials.

Trigg Fiscal Court Magistrate Jon Goodwin filed Thursday morning to run against incumbent Circuit Court Clerk Pam Perry. No other county seats are available this election cycle, said County Clerk Wanda Thomas, but redistricting and retirement could potentially give the county two new representatives in the state House.

Trigg County was part of the fifth and eighth congressional districts. However, under the new redistricting legislation recently signed into law, the county will be represented by districts 4 and 5. Rep. Melvin Henley, D-Murray, has already announced he will not seek reelection in District 5, as has Rep. Mike Cherry, D-Princeton, for District 4. District 8, currently represented by John Tilley, D-Hopkinsville, is now contained within Christian County.

Thomas also said commonwealth's attorney is up for election, but the office represents more than just Trigg County and therefore needs to file with the Secretary of State. Commonwealth's Attorney G.L. Ovey, D-Eddyville, has already

KENTUCKY BRIEF

Appeals judge signs temporary stay in abuse case

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A state appeals court judge has ordered a temporary hold on details in records the Cabinet for Health and Family Services must release regarding children who died or were injured as a result of abuse or neglect. Chief Court of Appeals Judge Jeff Taylor issued his order Friday just before a deadline for the cabinet to turn over records, the Lexington Herald-Leader reported. The cabinet began providing documents expected to exclude a broader range of information. Franklin County Circuit Judge Phillip Shepherd this month ordered the release to the Herald-Leader and The Courier-Journal with only limited redactions. The cabinet asked the state Court of Appeals to let it withhold information under its terms, and Friday's stay allows that until a three-judge appeals panel takes up the issue Feb. 7.

Businesses, commuters, school cope with collapse

BY DENNIS O'NEIL
NEW ERA FEATURE WRITER

With the collapse of a portion of Eggner's Ferry Bridge on Thursday night, area businesses are notifying commuters of detours and keeping programming in place.

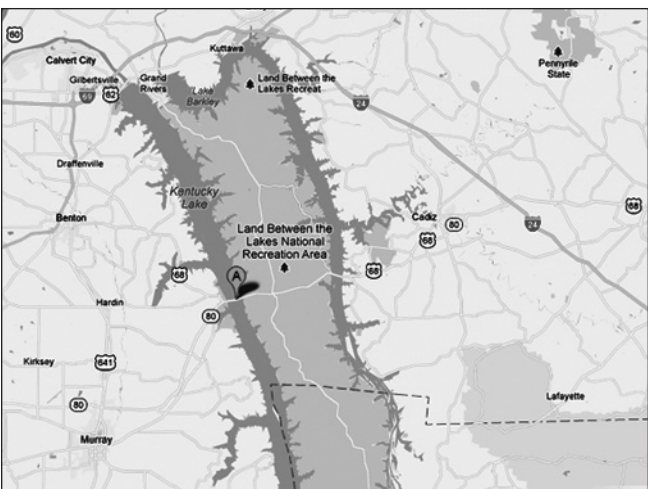

A 322-foot supply ship struck the main span of the bridge around 8 p.m. Thursday. A section of the bridge roughly the length of a football field was destroyed, but no injuries or deaths were reported.

The Kentucky Department of Transportation is conducting a structural analysis of the bridge that should take at least the next few days.

On Friday, inspectors completed a check of the west part of the bridge. It was found to be stable, said Keith Todd, spokesman for the DOT. The east side of the structure is possibly unstable and only "essential personnel" are allowed on the bridge.

Todd also said they have set up marked detours directing motorists around the collapsed bridge.

The 2,800 commuters who use the bridge every day will have to detour north into the Grand Rivers area or south to near Dover, Tenn.

"It turns a trip from Aurora to Cadiz from a 20-mile trip to a 64-mile trip," Todd said. "That's going to be a hardship."

Denise Schmittou, a public affairs specialist with Land Between the Lakes National Recreation Area, said all of LBL's employees made it to work Friday.

"We're trying to conduct business as usual," Schmittou said, "just knowing that, for the commuters, it is going to take longer for them to get here."

LBL closed a campground and boat ramp near the bridge for emergency workers' use. All other facilities are open, and no programs have been cancelled, Schmittou said.

John Rittenhouse, park manager at Kenlake State Resort Park, also said his employees all came to work Friday.

Because no employees have to drive across the bridge to get to work, Rittenhouse doesn't think the collapse will affect his workers too much.

He said Kenlake has spoken to its guests and advised them of routes around the lake.

None of the facility's programs or events have been cancelled thus far.

"This time of the year, we have a lot of meetings and small conventions," Rittenhouse said. "If people plan those things that far in advance, usually a half hour or 45-minute detour is probably not going to cancel their plans. So far, everybody is still coming."

Catherine Sivills, assistant vice president for communications at Murray State University, said she hadn't heard of any students or faculty members missing class Friday due to the collapse.

With much of the university's coursework available online, many students can still access class material without having to commute to campus, she said.

Sivills thinks the collapse could affect travel for student groups and sports teams. She said the university hasn't cancelled any classes due to the collapse and is being flexible with commuter employees who have to drive around the lake.

"It is obviously an inconvenience with a 25-minute addition to the commute," Sivills said. "The university is very flexible in this kind of an emergency."

the boat carrying rocket parts hit the bridge because it did not go under the tallest part, Humphries said.

"The vessel did not use the correct path under the bridge," said Humphries, who was just leaving the scene when he spoke with the New Era.

Depending on the water level, the tallest part of the bridge tends to be around 60 to 70 feet above the surface, said Keith Todd, spokesman for the Kentucky Department of Transportation. He was not certain of water level at the time of the crash, but questioned whether recent flooding played a role. Law enforcement officials at the scene estimated the boat was three stories tall, although other reports indicate it could be as tall as five stories.

Lights visible to boaters are on both sides of the bridge, Todd said. Although several of those lights were reportedly out Thursday night, Todd said, there were still lights that were visible. DOT officials had planned to fix the lights Saturday, Todd said. He also confirmed that only one span of the bridge — Span E — fell into the lake.

Humphries met with Lt. Gov. Jerry Abramson and Mike Hancock, secretary of the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet, Friday and discussed options for the cleanup and rerouting traffic. Although some options to temporarily mend the bridge were mentioned, Humphries said the size of the portion that is missing and the age of the bridge rule out a quick fix.

"That bridge is 80 years old," Humphries said. "I think there is a limit to what you could or want to do."

The bridge was built in 1932, and the elevation was increased in 1943, according to a news release.

The 2,800 vehicles that cross the lake on any given day will need to use alternate routes for the foreseeable future, Todd said.

There have been talks, and even a few preliminary plans, to create a new bridge over the lake, Humphries said. He hopes the crash will speed up those talks and spur state lawmakers to fund the project.

He spoke with Sen. Rand Paul and U.S. Rep. Ed Whitfield at the scene Friday, and both assured Humphries they would help cut through red tape that could slow any eventual construction.

Abramson said the bridge was already a part of the state's six-year highway plan and promised to shift the focus to building a new bridge, according to a release. Hancock said the state is "exploring" whether construction of the new bridge can be accelerated, according to the same release.

At this point, picking up the pieces and finding a solution for the community is the most important thing, Humphries said.

Less than 24 hours after the crash, the idea of a boat destroying the bridge still shocks the judge.

"The double yellow line that goes down the middle of the road ... now drapes the bow of a boat," Humphries said.

A frequent voyage been on Kentucky Lake, Sacco said. In fact, he said the ship is contracted by United Launch Alliance — a joint venture owned by Lockheed Martin and The Boeing Company — to regularly haul rocket parts from a facility in Decatur, Ala.

"This is a frequent voyage," Sacco said. "It's nothing new to the crew or captain."

Sacco declined to release the identity of anyone aboard the ship, as did Coast Guard spokesman Lt. Ron Easley, until their investigations are complete. However, Sacco said the same crew has made the trip many times before, and the people onboard "are experienced mariners."

The crew was still aboard the ship as of 5 p.m. Friday, and no one has been suspended or put on leave of any kind, according to Sacco.

He said there is no evidence thus far to indicate human error.

Since 2002, the ship has made regular trips to both Vandenberg Air Force Base in California and Cape Canaveral Air Force Station in Florida, according to a ULA statement. The Delta Mariner was headed for Cape Canaveral on this particular trip, carrying equipment for several different projects, the statement said.

Some equipment is intended for an Air Force mission to launch a communications satellite into orbit in April.

The other components will go toward a NASA mission involving a probe used to study the sun, according to the statement. Jessica Rye, a spokeswoman for ULA, said neither mission would be pushed back because of the crash.

Although the equipment did not appear to be damaged, a greater investigation of the hardware is under way to insure there are no issues, according to the statement.

Right now, the goal for Foss Maritime is to assist in moving the ship away from the bridge.

Sacco said. A naval architect and salvage expert were en route to the site Friday, and Sacco said the captain, crew and company are cooperating fully with the Coast Guard and Kentucky officials. Sacco does not remember a wreck of this magnitude happening within the company in his 19 years with Foss Maritime.

Easley was not sure when the boat would be cleared from the area or when the Coast Guard's investigation would be complete. He was also unaware if any criminal charges or civil suits had been discussed; they are sometimes an option in circumstances like this, he said.

The Coast Guard's National Maritime Center handles the licensing of pilots for commercial vessels like the Delta Mariner, Easley said.

He did not know the requirements for obtaining such a license.

A message left with the NMC was not returned by press time.

Lawmakers move to postpone congressional deadline

BY ROGER ALFORD
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Congressional candidates would have an additional week to file for election under an agreement reached on Friday between the House and Senate.

Negotiators trying to work out an agreement on a congressional redistricting plan have been deadlocked for a week, but some movement had been reported in private talks over the past couple of days. That prompted a deal to move Tuesday's filing deadline to Feb. 7. "It will only pertain to the congressional filing deadline," said House Floor Leader Rocky Adkins, D-Sandy Hook. "That was the agreement that was reached to allow communications and conversations to continue to hopefully reach a compromise."

That means candidates for all other offices, including legislative seats, still have only until Tuesday to file.

The Senate voted 25-0 on Friday to set the congressional filing deadline. The House is expected to vote on the new deadline Monday, which would give lawmakers most of next week to complete congressional redistricting.

Congressional redistricting occurs every 10 years to account for population changes reported in the U.S. Census. The latest count found that the state's overall population grew from 4 million to 4.3 million from 2000 to 2010. Populations of rural areas in eastern and western Kentucky declined sharply while urban centers grew, forcing new boundaries to be drawn so that each congressman represents an equal number of people.

Republicans want to ensure that the redistricting process strengthens their hold on those seats while making inroads into the two held by Democrats. Democrats, meanwhile, are pressing to redraw the congressional maps in a way that would weaken the GOP's hold while bolstering their own. The issue has been divisive for the lawmakers, sparking a partisan fight that has overshadowed the first month of the legislative session.

Senate GOP leaders are pushing a proposal that leaves the congressional districts in roughly the same geographic areas, tweaked in a way that benefits Republicans. House Democrats want to reshape the largely rural 1st District in western Kentucky and 5th District in eastern Kentucky, both of which lost population over the past decade. That reshaping would favor Democrats.

The Democratic-controlled House and the Republican-dominated Senate settled on new lines around state legislative districts after heated debate most of the past three weeks. Gov. Steve Beshear signed the legislative redistricting bill into law on Friday. But House Republicans filed a lawsuit on Thursday challenging the constitutionality of the new legislative map.

A hearing has been scheduled for Monday morning for Judge Phillip Shepherd to consider the GOP lawmakers' request for an injunction to postpone implementation of the new districts until the case can be resolved.

Director Jackie Saturley (left) led a demonstration Thursday night for the Hopkinsville-Christian County Public Library's Overdrive software, which allows patrons to download eBooks and digital audiobooks. The library has offered the software since June 2011. Saturley said many patrons have had difficulties using the library's new software since it was implemented. More than 60 people attended the demonstration.

Library offers demonstration for eBook technology

BY DENNIS O'NEIL
NEW ERA FEATURE WRITER

More than 60 patrons packed into the community room at the Hopkinsville-Christian County Public Library on Thursday for a demonstration of the library's Overdrive technology. The Overdrive program links cardholders to an online consortium where they can access more than 28,000 eBooks and digital audiobooks.

Library Director Jackie Saturley led the session, working with the Overdrive software on a laptop with a screen projected at the front of the room for patrons to see. Saturley took questions from attendees, many of whom had been experiencing problems downloading eBooks to devices like Kindles or iPhones.

Saturley said the library's collection of eBooks is its fastest growing format in terms of checkouts. It launched its Tumblebook program, which offers children's eBooks, in February 2011. It started offering Overdrive, which offers content for all ages, in June 2011. In the program's first month, 56 items were downloaded by library cardholders. By December, the number had grown to more than 1,000.

Saturley, who took over as library director in September 2010, said she received many requests for eBooks from patrons when she started. The library's eBook titles are available through Kentucky Libraries Unbound, a consortium to which the Overdrive software links patrons. Saturley said the Overdrive programs costs around $4,000 per year, with half going toward purchasing new titles and the other half toward software maintenance.

Since implementing the program, the library has received many requests from patrons who have needed help navigating it, Saturley said.

"They came in wanting us to do everything for them," Saturley said. "There was such a number of people saying, 'Help me.' There were even people who were techies who came in."

Saturley said they could have more software demonstrations in the future. Some patrons have requested computer classes to help them get acclimated with the software, she said.

Wrapping up the demonstration Thursday, Saturley was pleased to be offering the eBooks for patrons.

"We have to move forward, we can't stand still," she told the crowd. "We had so many requests for eBooks that I thought it would be the right thing to do for the library."

Republican officially enters 6th District race

BY ROGER ALFORD
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT, Ky. — A potential rematch of last year's squeaker of a congressional race between Democratic U.S. Rep. Ben Chandler and Republican challenger Andy Barr is in the making.

Both campaigns delivered candidacy papers Friday to run for the 6th District congressional seat, just days ahead of the state's filing deadline.

An aide filed without fanfare on behalf of Chandler, who later released a two-sentence statement.

"It has been an honor to serve the constituents of the 6th District as their representative in Congress," Chandler said in the statement emailed to reporters by

In October, the landowner of Newton Place Apartments in Oak Grove entered an apartment when she suspected some people living there were not on the lease. Once inside, the woman allegedly found marijuana plants and called the police.

Police gained a warrant and searched the apartment. They found six marijuana plants, an electronic scale, weed killer, 31 "nickel"-sized baggies and a book on how to grow cannabis. In addition, an SKS assault rifle with 20 rounds and a Remington lever-action rifle were found in the master bedroom.

Diana K. Wilmoth, 29, of Oak Grove, and Robert L. Wilmoth, 21, also of Oak Grove, were both charged with trafficking in

A former psychiatrist pleaded no contest on Wednesday to charges that he made sexual advances on a patient in 2010, according to Christian Circuit Court records.

Manuel De La Rocha, 81, was initially charged with first-degree sexual abuse, second-degree unlawful imprisonment and harassment. As part of his plea bargain, De La Rocha was sentenced to five years on a reduced charge of first-degree wanton endangerment. He can avoid jail time if he doesn't break the conditions of his parole for three years.

De La Rocha entered an Alford Plea, which means he acknowledged there was enough evidence to convict him without admitting guilt. He has since Qwanelius Bussell, 21, of Milton Road, was sentenced to five years imprisonment after pleading guilty to first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance (cocaine). Bussell was initially scheduled for sentencing on Jan. 10. Two weeks prior Bussell was admitted to Jennie Stuart Medical Center where he was labeled in critical condition. He later recovered.

KENTUCKY BRIEF

Elizabethtown may be featured on TV segment

ELIZABETHTOWN, Ky. (AP) -- Elizabethtown starred in a movie a few years ago and the central Kentucky city may be showing up on television soon in a show that features former Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw.

A freelance photographer working with Bradshaw's show, "Today in America," spent some time in Elizabethtown this week. Garrett Caffacus told The News-Enterprise he interviewed city officials and residents and filmed local businesses, restaurants and residential areas.

It's not known when the show, which will feature small towns across the U.S., will air. Elizabethtown Director of Planning and Development Ed Poppe says Caffacus' work is for a segment titled "Hidden Gems," which will air on the Travel Channel and local cable affiliates.

spokeswoman Meghan Groob. "I enjoy working for the people of central Kentucky, and very much look forward to continuing to bring a moderate, commonsense voice to Washington."

Barr personally delivered his documents, then followed with a press conference in which he criticized Chandler as too closely aligned with President Barack Obama to effectively represent central Kentucky.

"The American people are facing a deficit of leadership in Washington," he said. "You see too much partisanship, too much bickering. We need new leadership where we can work across party lines."

Barr, a Lexington attorney, has been actively preparing for the rematch. He said in a statement that he will file a report with the Federal Election Commission next week showing he has raised more than $425,000 for the campaign.

"We're well ahead of our fundraising pace this time around," Barr said Friday. "We will have the resources we need to communicate our message of limited government, free enterprise and fiscal responsibility."

Two years ago, Barr won a crowded GOP primary, but went on to lose one of the closest congressional races in the nation to Chandler who outspent him by more than $1 million.

Kentucky Republicans have been using Obama against Democratic candidates for a variety of state offices to no avail. GOP challengers using that play lost races against Democratic Gov. Steve Beshear and Attorney General Jack Conway in November.

Barr is hoping the tactic will be more effective in a general election when Obama is actually on the ballot.

"The agenda of this president has not been in the interest of the people of central Kentucky," Barr told reporters. "It's hurt the people of central Kentucky."

Gov. wrong to fight release of records

Gov. Steve Beshear is trying to convince Kentuckians that a state court's ruling will jeopardize the safety of people who report suspicions of child abuse. But the governor's argument is wrong on several counts and will not bring about an honest and full review of the Cabinet for Health and Family Services. There are serious questions about the agency's ability to monitor and protect at-risk children. The release of some records, including those in the case of 9-year-old Amy Dye, of Todd County, who was murdered by her adoptive brother, leads many to believe that the agency is seriously dysfunctional or understaffed, or both.

OUR OPINION

In today's New Era, we have published Beshear's position in an opinion piece he wrote about the Jan. 19 Franklin Circuit Court ruling on the cabinet's records, sought by newspapers, in abuse and neglect cases that resulted in the death or serious injury of a child.

First, the governor is incorrect to suggest that investigative information will be compromised because the court's ruling does not exempt that information from disclosure. Actually, the Kentucky Open Records Law exemption on open investigations will protect that information.

Second, the governor says the names of people accused of crimes should not be released because they could later be exonerated. This is incorrect. The names of people charged with crimes are released in all criminal cases. Some of them are later found innocent or have charges against them dropped.

Third, the governor wrote, "The General Assembly should set the policy on this issue, not the courts." Actually, the judge was ordering the cabinet to abide by a law already enacted by the General Assembly.

Finally, the governor says attorneys for The Courier-Journal and the Lexington Herald-Leader argued that absolutely "no information whatsoever" should be confidential. The governor is wrong again. The newspapers did not make this argument. The newspapers were attempting to stop the cabinet from using broad arguments for redacting, or removing, information from abuse records.

Kentucky's ability to protect children from abusive and neglectful parents and guardians cannot be ensured until we have a full disclosure of how the cabinet has conducted investigations in the most serious cases. The governor's position in this debate is delaying that review.

Kentucky New Era editorials are the consensus opinion of the editorial board, which meets every week and includes Publisher Taylor W. Hayes, Opinion Editor Jennifer P. Brown and Editor Eli Pace.

OP-ED

Children remain top concern

You teach in a small community and suspect a student is being abused. You want to report it, but you fear retaliation. Can you come forward without the newspaper naming you as the accuser?

Or maybe you're a grandmother. You worry about the man your daughter is living with. But you love your grandchildren, and you think they're being neglected.

Will you be able to report your suspicion without alerting your daughter's volatile and unstable boyfriend and jeopardizing your own safety? The answer to both scenarios, unfortunately, is "no."

If a case of suspected child abuse and/or neglect that later results in death or serious injury, and you reported it, your name likely will be released to anybody who asks, whether that's a TV reporter, a blogger or even the accused. That's one of the real-life consequences of a new judicial ruling related to state records on child abuse and neglect.

The ruling, issued Jan. 19 in Franklin Circuit Court, stems from litigation involving Kentucky newspapers' attempts to access records involving cases that resulted in a child's death or serious injury.

An attorney for the newspapers has argued that no information whatsoever should be kept confidential. The judge disagreed. He said the Cabinet for Health and Family Services can black out certain information, such as names of children seriously injured in cases of abuse; Social Security numbers and other financial information; the names of other children in the family who weren't involved; and the names of parents who report abuse — but the names of relatives, police officers and school officials who report abuse will be made public.

But we don't think the judge's ruling was protective enough, and so the Cabinet recently filed notice that it would appeal.

News papers will criticize the state for this decision. After all, they get to write the headlines. To date, the Cabinet has been accused of "operating under a veil of secrecy" in a supposed attempt to protect inept workers and a poorly designed system. But this is not about shielding the system from scrutiny. We understand the need to be more transparent — in fact, I ordered such a paradigm shift in the cabinet's treatment of child abuse records as early as last fall.

We are not arguing for the right to camouflage the actions of the Cabinet.

net or its workers. That information is already being provided and we will continue to do so. But increased openness has to be implemented in a consistent and thoughtful way that holds the best interests of the child as its paramount priority.

That is our top and only concern. There are very real consequences — sometimes unintended — to eliminating confidentiality. Some of those consequences are:

- Police and prosecutors routinely share information with the Cabinet to help it determine whether children need to be removed from a home for their safety. That information might include witness interviews, forensic evidence, autopsy results and statements by an accused immediately following a tragic event. The Court's ruling does not exempt that information from disclosure. Consequently, prosecutors will likely begin withholding that information rather than risk jeopardizing their ability to pursue criminal charges.

- The ruling also doesn't shield from disclosure information related to voluntary or involuntary termination of parental rights, and to a subsequent adoption. As a result, a parent who previously lost custody of a child via court order will be able to track down the child and the family who adopted that child. The result could potentially be tragic.

- The court ruling does not exempt from disclosure the names of parents, guardians or custodial parties found by the Cabinet to have abused or neglected a child but later exonerated once a hearing on the charges was held.

Publicizing their names before their cases are fully heard is a violation of due process and directly harms them and their families. The Cabinet must make decisions in a short timeframe, and often errs on the side of caution. Parents or others accused should have the right to defend themselves before they're punished. Such consequences are indicative of the complex social, emotional and legal issues that surround cases of child abuse and neglect.

In the aftermath of my directive requiring more transparency, I have asked the General Assembly to give these issues a public airing. The legislature should amend state law in a way that ensures our child welfare system is effective and eliminates the ambiguities that led to recent court rulings. The General Assembly should set the policy on this issue, not the courts.

In the meantime, however, the Cabinet, its attorneys and I will continue to battle in court in the best interests of our children — regardless of what criticism comes our way.

Democrats root for Newt

Ask you honest Democrat, and they'll tell you what I'm about to tell you: We're rooting for Newt.

The death penalty for marijuana? Replacing janitors with school kids? Mining the moon for minerals? Go, Newt.

It's not that the former Speaker doesn't have the smarts. Quite the contrary. He may be too smart for his own good — at least his own good in politics. His mind races with ideas. His mouth moves even faster.

I've done television with Newt and speeches with Newt, and it's a blast. He's funny and gracious. He's always interesting. He knows facts that would make Sarah Palin's head swim. He understands history. He's pointed and provocative.

It's just that a substantial number of his ideas are, well, different. Nutty. Like the minerals on the moon.

That is fine if you're a professor or a professional speaker. Not fine if you are a politician.

The great columnist Walter Shapiro said in a recent interview that every time he goes to hear Newt speak, he comes away with 15 ideas for a column; whereas, every time he hears Mitt Romney, he forgets the 15 ideas he had coming in. Newt makes great copy.

If I were a Republican activist — a sick and tired of the smooth and calculating moderate turned conservative-turning moderate about to be turning conservative again Romney — I'd be walking the precincts for Newt. And I'd be having almost as good a time as I did back in 1980, when I ran phone banks for Ted Kennedy in our fight against Jimmy Carter. I'm not sure who the Republicans were rooting for back then, but I know this: They were hoping the fight would never end, and in many respects, it didn't.

And that is exactly what we Democrats root for with Newt.

Do I really think the Republicans are going to nominate Newt for president? Nah. Too good to be true. Even now, the spotlight is beginning to grow pretty harshly. Eventually, the grownups in the establishment who think nominating Newt is a gift to the Democrats will probably get the upper hand — but hopefully later rather than sooner.

This has all the makings of a nice bitter fight. Newt is not about to go gently into the night. No Rick Perry he. Newt lives on debates, regardless of his own war chest. He has friends with super-PACs carrying his water. His supporters, many of them, are true believers.

The fight between Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama went the distance. Even if they are, today, loyal partners, I have no doubt there was no love lost when it ended.

But it was never blood war on the ground. The people on both sides were old friends who went back to being friends when it was over. It was liberals against liberals. Indeed, among Democrats, you can't help but notice that the big whiners about Obama aren't the Hillary supporters who joined up at the end, but the early Obama-ites who had expectations no one could achieve.

Newt-Romney, however, is already nastier than Hillary-Obama ever was (with all of one bad ad, the red phone). Fine by me. The nastier the better. What Hillary-Obama proves is that it's not the length of the fight but the bitterness and animosity on the ground that hurts. Like in 1980. Go, Newt.

There were, and probably still are, two schools of thought about 1980. The Kennedy side believed the only hope of defeating Reagan was to defeat Carter first. The Carter side felt that Reagan won because Carter was so defeated by the process. My guess is there is a similar debate on the Republican side right now.

But the bottom line is that Reagan did win, which is why all of us who are rooting for Obama are rooting for Newt to go the distance in his attacks on Romney. If he does, win or lose, we win.

Redistrict debate headed to court

Debate over redistricting dominated much of the discussion in Frankfort this week and is now headed for court.

This week the House Republican Floor Leader, Rep. Jeff Hoover, filed a lawsuit in Franklin Circuit Court regarding the district lines drawn for the 100 House districts by the House majority leadership. The suit will also seek an injunction that seeks to stop the new redistricting plan and postpone the January 31st filing deadline to seek public office.

Debate over district lines in both chambers has created a terse atmosphere in both chambers, and confusion and anger among many of you. In the case of the House redistricting plan, 246 voting precincts would be split. What that means to you is not only confusion about where and who you can vote for in future elections, but also the cost to your county in buying new voting machines and hiring additional precinct workers. In Henderson County alone the House redistricting plan drawn by the majority will cost $90,000 in taxpayer money.

The redistricting process in this session also illustrates the problem that is created when legislators draw their own boundaries, which is often more about politics than people. Two fellow legislators filed bills this week seeking to make the process less political and more about good policy.

Representative Bill Farmer of Lexington filed House Bill 310, which if passed would create a seven person non-partisan board to handle redistricting. Each member would be appointed by the Kentucky Supreme Court Justices, one from each of the seven districts covered by the high court.

In addition Representative Tim Moore of Elizabethtown filed a similar proposal. His bill, House Bill 310 would create a 12 person board to oversee redistricting.

Under Rep. Moore's bill each of the four legislative caucuses in the House and Senate would appoint three members to the panel.

It's interesting to note that these bills have support from both Democrats and Republicans in the House. We understand how redistricting in this session has created anger and apathy about how we conduct business in Frankfort, and many of us are committed to coming up with a better way to redraw boundaries every 10 years.

In addition to House redistricting, it appears that Congressional redistricting may also head to court after a conference committee of House and Senate members could not reach an agreement on new boundaries.

Also this week the House passed House Resolution 62, which I co-sponsored; that asked the U.S. Department of Labor to waive a section of the Fair Labor Standards Act that would include agriculture and farming in banning the use of child labor.

When I was a young boy I worked on my family's farm, and that experience helped shape my work ethic in my business and as a legislator. We must not allow the overreach of the Federal government to destroy the proud tradition of family to farming in the Proud Country.

Presidential address re-run

Summertime is usually when TV networks air repeats of shows we've already seen. In his State of the Union Address Tuesday night, the president got a five-month jump on the summer season by re-running a class-envy video he has broadcast more times than local stations have shown episodes of "The Andy Griffith Show."

Instead of a credible assessment of the state of the union ... heard more of the same about how "the rich" aren't paying their "fair share" in taxes.

There was an unserious nod to government overspending to which he has massively contributed.

Why should those of us who work for a living give more money to a government that under Democrats and Republicans has been such a poor steward of what we have already provided? Confiscating all of the wealth of Mitt Romney, Warren Buffett and every other billionaire and millionaire in the country would have a negligible effect on the national debt, unless government decided to live within taxpayers' means.

Having Warren Buffett's secretary, Debbie Bosanek, in the gallery with first lady Michelle Obama was cheap theatrics. If the president doesn't think it "fair" that she pays a higher tax percentage than her boss, let him ask Congress to lower her percentage with a flat tax. Bosanek may pay a higher tax rate, but Buffett pays a lot more money to the federal government.

President Obama wants four more years to continue the policies he's inflicted on us the last three years. Why would anyone believe that his policies, which are not succeeding and can't succeed, will miraculously work given more time?

In his 2009 State of the Union Address, the president promised to "cut the deficit in half" by January 2013. He is headed in the opposite direction to the tune of $4 trillion in additional spending and a debt that exceeds $15 trillion. If he breaks that promise, should he be held accountable?

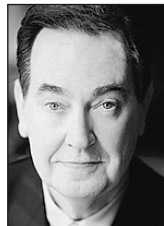

In his address to Congress, the president spoke of the need to create jobs, but he has rejected one of the easiest methods of creating jobs by opposing the Keystone XL pipeline project in order to curry favor with environmentalists. Some estimates put the jobs potential at 20,000. Canada, meanwhile, is threatening to sell the oil that could have been ours to China. The president will create jobs in China, not America.

This president has squandered a great opportunity. As the country's first African-American president, Barack Obama had the chance to lead poor African-Americans out of poverty by encouraging them to embrace the principles that would allow them to become self-reliant instead of stoking envy of the successful. He had that responsibility. He has failed to live up to it. That is a tragedy, not only for him, but for those he left behind.

Envy has never created a single job, put a family back together, encouraged a man to provide for his children or endowed young women with the kind of self-regard that would encourage them not to create children they too often neglect. The state of many poor African-Americans remains how it has been for years — too many fatherless children, too many uneducated, hopeless women and too many men in prison. President Obama might have done something about that beyond more government programs and handouts.

Optimism, self-regard and the economic, social and spiritual principles that built and sustained America, offering opportunity, not guaranteed outcome, are what the president should be stressing. Government is not our keeper. We are our own and our neighbor's keepers. Addicting more and more people to government and the view that others owe them a living is the worst form of covetousness. In case the president missed it in Jeremiah Wright's church, there's a commandment against coveting your neighbor's property.

State's technology lag affects job hunt

Advancements in communications technologies have significant positive effects across our communities. As consumers and businesses rely more on broadband and wireless technologies, it becomes increasingly important for Kentucky to modernize its telecom networks to keep pace with technological advancements and a rapidly changing marketplace.

However, the infrastructure required by these new technologies is costly and without the forward-thinking public investment in place, potential private sector investments will pass by Kentucky.

If we don't focus our efforts on needed changes, our communities may not receive the benefit of advanced telecommunications networks.

Jobs in all sectors of our economy are possible if the right environment is created. In order to attract private industry to Kentucky, outdated telecom laws should be updated. Our telecommunications laws were last updated in 2006, but technology has changed dramatically since then with the advent of smart phones, and wireless broadband services.

Unfortunately, Kentucky has fallen behind in modern telecom policy and other states are passing us by in the race for jobs and investment. States like Indiana, Florida, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, and others, have recently passed laws to update telecom laws and in turn, they are watching new jobs and investment flow into their economies.

Monopoly-era telecom rules stifle competition, increase operational costs and cause the Commonwealth to miss out on new and valuable economic opportunities. With state revenues down as a result of the economy, legislators like me are looking for every opportunity to boost investments and fuel growth using private capital. In fact, during this recession, wireless and broadband technologies made the telecommunications industry one of a few bright spots in our troubled economy.

As Kentuckians, we need to ensure we capture economic growth. Modernizing out-of-date telecom regulations is the perfect way to improve our state's economy without costing taxpayers a cent. By updating Kentucky's telecom laws, 2012 can be the year we get Kentucky back on track, technologically and financially.

HOSPITAL: Cumberland Hall moves into new facility

Leavell, along with several members of the Christian County Chamber of Commerce.

Guest speakers at the ceremony included District Judge James G. Adams, state Sen. Joey Pendleton, Blanchfield Army Community Hospital commander Col. Paul R. Cordts and Debbie Osten, the senior vice president for the behavioral health division of Universal Health Services.

Cumberland Hall Hospital CEO Jim Spruyt welcomed those on hand.

"If you take a tour today, you will notice our walls etched with words of encouragement," Spruyt said. "Words such as 'Strength,' 'Bravery,' 'Hope,' 'Spirit,' 'Endurance' and 'Resilience.' These are the traits and values and characteristics we hope to instill in our patients — both military and civilian. It takes courage to seek hope in a time of crisis."

The hospital expanded from the 56 beds at its former facility to 97 beds in the new 69,000-square-foot building.

Cumberland Hall Hospital takes care of a wide variety of patients, including those with behavioral health needs. The hospital has been in Hopkinsville since 1987, but the new facility has more room and will allow caregivers to provide more services.

The state-of-the-art building will serve children adolescents, adults and active duty military. There is also an additional 12 acres surrounding the facility, should the hospital need to expand in the future.

Cumberland Hall Hospital treats a wide variety of psychological problems, including anxiety, depression and combat stress and its services include acute psychiatric, addiction recovery and medical detoxification in addition to programs tailored to individualized treatment plans. One key feature of the new facility is an on-site accredited school. The hospital also works with the Pennyroyal Center mental health clinic, which opened a new clinic Oct. 17 in Oak Grove.

The new facility has a gymnasium with a 26-station exercise room, outdoor exercise areas and an indoor climbing wall.

Colonels crush Trigg County

BY JOE WILSON
NEW ERA SPORTS EDITOR

CADIZ, Ky. — The Christian County Colonels turned up the defense in the second half and crushed host Trigg County 84-60 Friday night in a high school basketball game.

Smithhart

The victory ended a six-game losing streak for Christian County and assured the 1964-65 Colonels' team of having the worst record in school history (5-17), as the Colonels improved to 6-15.

"That is not a five-win team," Trigg coach Mike Wright said. "They have great athletes who can score the ball and they have a big guy in the middle. They are very talented."

Wright

The Colonels and Wildcats (16-6) went back and forth in the first half with Trigg leading by as much as 10-6 early and the Colonels enjoying a 31-24 advantage late in the first half.

However, Trigg went on a 11-0 run to take a 35-31 advantage only to see the Colonels knot the game at 35 after scoring the final four points of the half.

It was a different game in the second half as Christian County employed a full-court pressure that created havoc with the Wildcats. An 11-0 run

The Lady Colonels improve to 8-11 on the season and will look to capture their third straight win Monday against University Heights Academy at Blazer Gym. Tip-off is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Caldwell (11-8) will face host Paducah St. Mary at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Mr. Basketball Hickey, LSU look to upset top-ranked Kentucky

BY KEITH JENKINS
NEW ERA ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

Anthony Hickey Sr., the father of LSU freshman point guard and former Christian County High School standout Anthony Hickey, said his son plays with a chip on his shoulder after always being told he was too small or wasn't good enough.

That chip will be the size of a boulder when Hickey's Tigers take on No. 1 Kentucky today in Baton Rouge, La.

Hickey led the Colonels to their first Sweet 16 state championship in program history last March at Rupp Arena. Shortly after, the 5-foot-11, 182-pound guard was So was Hickey, who averaged 22.5 points, 7.3 rebounds, 6.5 steals and 4.8 assists in Christian County's four wins in the state tournament, not good enough to play for Calipari?

"It was not about that. He's good enough," Calipari said of Hickey. "There is no question. But we took Marquis Teague."

Hickey and Teague, an Indianapolis native and the starting point guard for the top-ranked Wildcats (20-1, 6-0), posted similar numbers in the Kentucky-Indiana All-Star Classic series last June. Teague went 12-of-38 from the field, while averaging 15 points and five assists in the two high school all-star games. Hickey made eight of his 28 field goal attempts, while averaging 12.5 points and seven assists.

The 6-foot-2, 189-pound Teague, who averaged 22.7 points, 5.9 assists and 4.2 rebounds as a senior at Pike (Ind.) High School, is scoring 10 points per game, dishing out a team-high 4.4 assists and hauling in 2.7 rebounds at Kentucky. Hickey also is averaging 10 points per game, along with four assists and 3.8 rebounds for the Tigers (12-8, 2-4).

No. 11 Murray mindful of home loss to Panthers

MURRAY, Ky. (AP) — No. 11 Murray State hasn't lost at home since Eastern Illinois knocked the Racers off last season.

Panthers guard Jeremy Granger dribbled the ball to the top of the key, drove to his left and pulled up from 12 feet for the game winner against the Racers.

Murray State is still smarting from that fade away.

But the undefeated Racers (20-0, 8-0 Ohio Valley Conference) haven't lost at home since — a span of 16 games — are the only unbeaten team in men's Division I basketball. And because of what the Panthers (9-10, 2-5) did last season, for one of the rare times Murray State is looking back to prepare for today's matchup.

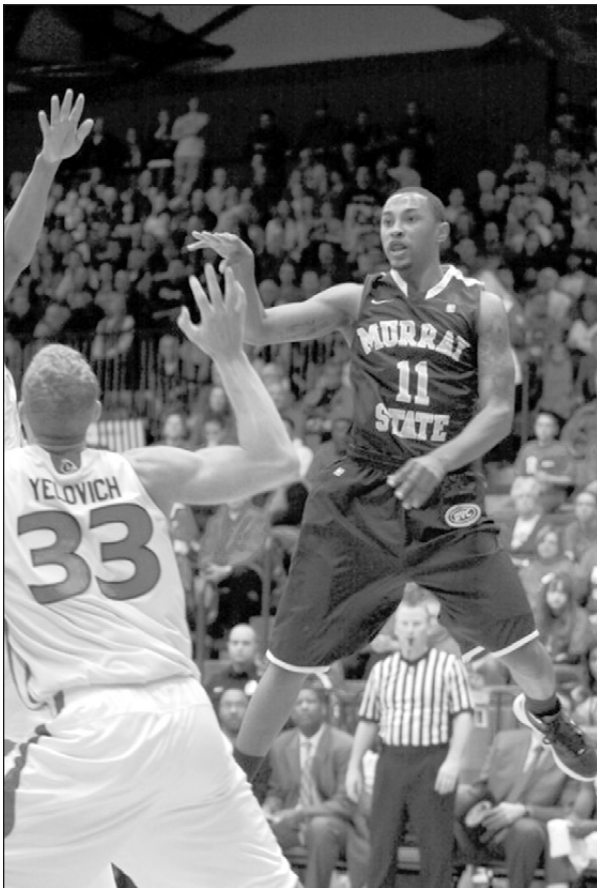

"It's our home court and they came here and they beat us," senior Ivan Aska said of the 61-60 loss. "I'm not with it."

Last year's game was a surprising setback for the Racers, who won their second straight regular-season OVC title but didn't make the NCAA tournament after being beaten in the semifinals of the conference tournament. Eastern Illinois finished 9-20 last season and has lost seven of its last eight conference road games since last year's win at Murray.

In the teams' Dec. 30 matchup this season in Charleston, Ill., Murray State dominated in a 73-40 victory, but the ability for a letdown has the Racers on alert after having a week between games.

But Murray State is getting back to full strength.

Aska will back for the first time in six games after he broke his hand in the first victory against the Panthers this season. Reserve guard Stacy Wilson is also back after missing one game because the death in the family.

"I'm very excited for them getting back on the court," said Jewuan Long, who was defending Granger when the Panthers guard hit the game winner.

Aska said he believes Long has a bitter taste from last year's game and is eager for another opportunity.

"He's motivated because Jewuan, he locks up players," Aska said. "He's one of our best defensive players."

Aska is motivated, too — Murray State was out-rebounded in four of the six games he missed. The 6-foot-7 senior leads the Racers in rebounds with six per game while averaging 12.6 points. He also is a vocal leader and is the inside complement to the outside game of point guard Isaiah Canaan, who is averaging 18.7 points per contest.

But where the two differ most are in steals and turnovers. While Teague has 23 steals and is among the conference leaders in turnovers with 63. Hickey has just 40 turnovers and 46 steals, the most in the SEC.

Hickey Sr., the girls' basketball coach at Christian County, said he still doesn't know why Kentucky didn't extend an offer to his son, but said he's fine with driving the 10.5 hours to Baton Rouge to watch him play.

"I'm happy with where my son is," Hickey Sr. said. "You always wonder because that's the question that me, his mom (Monica Moore) and my son are always asked. How did you end up in Louisiana and not Kentucky or Louisville? That's a question that we can't answer. But as a coach, it makes no sense to me to not offer a scholarship to the best player in the state of Kentucky."

"I really think it was a big steal and I'm glad he ended up where he's at," Hickey Sr. went on to say. "The Lord had a plan and I feel he's there for a reason."

Calipari admitted Friday to making recruiting mistakes in the past. He specifically recalled the year when he passed on former Connecticut All-American guard Kemba Walker, who led the Huskies to a 56-55 win over Calipari's Wildcats in last year's Final Four in Houston.

"I remember when we played Connecticut and I saw my man out of high school," Calipari said of Walker. "I said he was too small, I'm not sure he's good enough. Guess what? He was good enough."

Walker and the Huskies went on to win the national championship, and Walker was selected ninth overall by the Charlotte Bobcats in the 2011 NBA draft.

Hickey Sr., along with numerous other observers of Kentucky this season, said the Wildcats' only weakness is at the point guard position.

"They need a guard that can score, but only when he needs to," he said. "They need a guard that can push the ball and get it where it needs to be. And not just because it's my son, but he can do those things. He's shown it. He's been doing it his whole life."

Johnson said Thursday that he's going to do his best to help Hickey keep his emotions in check today and understand that it's just another game.

LSU guard Anthony Hickey drives to the basket during the first half of a game against Arkansas Jan. 14 in Fayetteville, Ark. Hickey, a former Christian County Colonel, will lead the Tigers against top-ranked Kentucky today in Baton Rouge, La.

"The only thing that I am going to talk to him about, just like I talk to this team, this is another game on our schedule guys," Johnson said of Hickey. "I know what everybody else is saying. If we come out of here and get out of character, that is not good. I am not going to talk to him about it. I don't need to. His mom and his dad are going to be here. He grew up there (in Kentucky), and he knows what that is about. But he also knows that if he is not on an even keel and not making good decisions, things aren't going to happen for us and for him."

Kentucky and LSU will meet for the 105th time. The Wildcats hold an 80-24 advantage in the series and have won the last two meetings by an average of 32 points.

But the last time Kentucky went into Baton Rouge as the No. 1 team in the country was Feb. 11, 1978. The Tigers upset the Wildcats 95-94.

Attempts to reach Hickey Jr., were unsuccessful.

Clippers send Bledsoe to D-League squad

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Clippers have assigned guard Eric Bledsoe to the Bakersfield Jam of the NBA Development League for a two-game rehabilitation assignment. He has been sidelined since having right knee surgery in October.

Clippers general manager Neil Olshey says if Bledsoe performs as expected, the team anticipates him rejoining them for the Clippers' trip to Denver today.

Bledsoe averaged 6.7 points, 3.6 assists and 2.8 rebounds in 81 games as a rookie last season.

Cremins takes leave with medical issue

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The College of Charleston announced Friday that coach Bobby Cremins is taking an indefinite leave of absence for a medical condition and will not be back this season. Assistant coach Mark Byington will take over the team, which started the season 10-2 with wins over Clemson and Tennessee, but have lost six of their last eight.

Cremins was at his home on Hilton Head Island when the announcement was made. The school did not specify Cremins' conditions or put a time frame on his return, and asked reporters to respect his privacy. Charleston athletic director Joe Hull did say Cremins' condition was not life threatening.

Cremins, 64, is in his sixth season with the Cougars after spending 19 years coaching Georgia Tech. He has led Charleston to 20 victories in each of his seasons, but his teams haven't been able to win the Southern Conference tournament to get to the NCAAAs. He is 579-375 in 31 seasons of coaching, and the Yellow Jackets named their home court for him before he returned to coaching in 2006.

Tiebreaker game to decide divisions

NEW YORK (AP) — A person familiar with the talks says baseball players and owners have reached an understanding that ties for division titles will be broken on the field under the new playoff format.

Since 1995, head-to-head record has been used to determine first place if both teams are going to the post-season. But with the start of a one-game, winner-take-all wild-card round, both sides agreed the difference between first place and a wild-card berth is too important to decide with a formula and a tiebreaker game would be played.

CCHS: Colonels end losing skid over the final 2:00 of the third quarter pushed the Colonels into a 60-48 lead.

"When you keep up with relentless pressure like that on a team, fatigue starts to set in, it's hard on a team," Christian County coach Tyler Smithhart said. "We have been struggling to speed teams up, which is my fault. Tonight we were able to do that and we were able to get a lot of turnovers."

Wright said his team wasn't able to match the bigger, stronger Colonels for the entire game.

"Their physicality got to us as the game wore on," he said. "We missed some free throws during that stretch too that allowed them to separate on us during that time."

Christian County continued to pour it on in the fourth quarter pushing the lead to 24.

C.J. Cotton had 17 points to lead five Colonels in double figures. Quan Poindexter had 15, Jarvis Irby contributed 14, James White had 12 and Isaiah Pollard added 10.

Tiger Woods plays a bunker shot on the 4th hole during the second round of the Abu Dhabi HSBC Championship on Friday in Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates.

Tiger lurking near Abu Dhabi tournament lead

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Tiger Woods moved into contention in the second round of the Abu Dhabi Golf Championship, shooting a 3-under 69 on Friday to finish two shots behind leader Thorbjorn Olesen.

Olesen, from Denmark, shot a 67 to reach 7 under. Teen stars Matteo Mannasero of Italy and Gareth Maybin of Northern Ireland were a stroke back. Mannasero shot a 65, and Maybin had a 70.

Rory McIlroy was in the group with Woods at 5 under after a 72 that included a two-stroke penalty for brushing away sand in front of his ball on the fringe at the ninth hole.

Top-ranked Luke Donald was 1 under after a 72. Fourth-ranked Martin Kaymer missed the cut in the tournament he won the last two years and three of the last four. He shot 77-73.

■Farmers Insurance

Open: In San Diego, Kyle Stanley made more than enough birdies to offset one big mistake, giving him a 4-under 68 on the South Course at Torrey Pines and a one-shot lead in the Farmers Insurance Open.

Stanley went over the back of the 14th green and into the hazard for a double bogey, but made five birdies the rest of the way and wound up one shot clear of Brandt Snedeker, who had a 64 on the North Course.

Stanley was at 14-under 130 going into the weekend, with the last two rounds on the South, which is 604 yards longer. That suits Stanley just fine; he's one of the longer hitters on the PGA Tour.

Phil Mickelson could only manage a 68 on the North Course after opening with a 77 on the South. He missed the cut in his hometown tournament for the first time in 10 years.

1st sandhill crane season proves to be challenging

FROM A KDFWR RELEASE

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Larry Dreamis Hill failed in his quest to take a bird during Kentucky's inaugural sandhill crane hunting season but says it wasn't for lack of effort.

"These birds were extremely challenging and seemed to change their patterns a little every day. I really enjoyed the challenge and look forward to future seasons of pursuing this bird. I remember when the first sandhill cranes showed up in Cecilia (in Hardin County) years ago now I have the opportunity to hunt them. It's very exciting," said Hill, Cecilia's retired fire chief.

Kentucky's first modern hunting season for sandhill cranes came to a close Jan. 15. The month-long season marked the first time in nearly 100 years that Kentucky sportsmen and sportswomen had the opportunity to hunt sandhill cranes in the Commonwealth. By closing day, hunters had harvested 50 birds. Kentucky had allowed for a maximum harvest of 400 sandhill cranes.

"The harvest number was not surprising to us because Kentucky does not have a tradition of sandhill crane hunting," said Rocky Pritchert, Migratory Bird Program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "These are extremely wary birds and are a challenge to hunt. Sandhill cranes are hunted in a fashion similar to geese, using decoys in fields. Sandhill cranes are hunted for their meat. They are generally regarded as the finest table fare among migratory birds."

Kentucky was the first state to allow sandhill crane hunting on the Eastern Population of sandhill cranes. The Mid-Continent Population of sandhill cranes has been hunted for more than 50 years in the United States.

Last fall, a survey coordinated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service counted a minimum of 72,000 sandhill cranes in the Eastern Population. "This population has experienced significant growth over the last decade and has reached a point where we can allow a limited harvest without impacting the population," said Pritchert.

This season, most of the cranes were harvested in Hardin and Barren counties. These are traditional wintering areas for sandhill cranes in Kentucky.

Hunters had to pass an online identification course before being issued a permit. Hunters will have to complete a post-season survey as well.

"The information obtained from these surveys helps us better understand how the season went," said Pritchert. "The information obtained from this hunt will help us manage future hunts of sandhill hunts in Kentucky and other states that might potentially hunt sandhill cranes."

Winter is a good time to reorganize gear, fix equipment

If you're like me and fishing is always on your brain you might want to use this time of the year to go through your gear and reorganize tackle and have rods and reels repaired.

This is also a great time to do some much needed service or repair work on your boat. If you have noticed a lack of lift or speed from your boat it could be your prop. You may want to send it off to be refurbished or polished. It's like putting new tires on your old truck once you get it back.

There's plenty to do this time of year to get ready for the new season and still fish on days we can. So don't let the winter months get you down and don't put off the stuff that will hold you back once spring gets here.

Both lakes are presently one foot over winter pool levels. You can get up to date information on both lakes by visiting www.kentuckylake.com. Use caution when navigating both lakes during the winter draw down.

The largemouth bite is slow on both lakes and is in a late winter pattern. The crappie bite is being reported as improved. The catfish are holding offshore and the bite is reported as good.

The water conditions are muddy to stained on both lakes with water temperatures in the mid to upper 40's. You can monitor water levels and generation schedules for both lakes at www.lakeinfo.tva.gov.

Local anglers report the largemouth bass bite as good. On both lakes these fish are occupying their winter holding areas in the creeks, bays and on the main lake. These winter holding areas are deep primary and secondary points that should have adjacent bluff like banks or transition banks that have wood and chunk rock cover.

This time of year start your search on a secondary point that has 12 to 20 feet of water structure present and work your way back out of the creek or bay to the primary main lake point. Some of the better creeks on Kentucky Lake this time of year are Duncan, Sugar and Roads creeks.

Panther and Rushing creeks can be very productive as well as mid lake. I look forward to fishing this time of year with my finesse jigs and shaky head plastics. On warmer days you can get the largemouth to chase baits and a mid-running crankbaits can be very productive.

Both Kentucky and Barkley Lake can produce well during the winter season; however we do have a few others nearby lakes that are known for their better cold water fishing. One of my favorite lakes to fish in the winter months is Dale Hollow and a close second is Lake Barren. Both of these lakes are deep and clear with plenty of steep rocky bluff banks for the fish to hold on.

Live bait can be very productive in the winter; however I prefer the challenge of the artificial lure and throw nothing but a 7/16-ounce finesse jig and a 1-4-ounce shaky head with a zoom green pumpkin finesse worm on it.

One of the keys to success this time of year is to watch weather patterns. If you see a warming trend coming that is going to span consecutive days, try and go on the second or third day of that trend. Largemouth are just like you and I and will be a little more active after they have had a chance to warm some.

Local anglers report the smallmouth bass improved. These fish are being taken on main lake points and the first secondary points in the creek and bays. These fish are being taken on topwater lures early in the morning, suspending jerkbaits, crankbaits and jigs.

Local anglers are reporting the crappie bite as fair. Reports have good numbers of crappie being caught by spider rigging over brush piles on the main lake ledges in 15-25 feet of water. A few anglers are catching a few nice crappie in the creeks and bays over brush in the 10-15 foot range of water using minnows under bobbers on warmer days.

Local anglers are reporting the white bass bite as good. These fish have schooling on main lake points located at the mouths of the creeks and bays to feed on the numerous schools of shad. These fish are hitting inline spinners, spoons and small crankbaits cast into the schools.

Local anglers are reporting the rockfish/hybrid bite as good. These fish are showing up below the dams of both rivers and at the spillways of the Cumberland City Steam Plant located on the Cumberland River upstream from Dover, Tenn. These fish are being taken on flukes fished on jig heads, swimbaits presented as single bait or on a three-armed Alabama rig if you're in Tennessee. The best bite seems to be coming during low light hours.

Information for this report was provided by Dave Stewart of Bass Buster Guide Service and other local anglers.

Former Todd County resident self-publishes book of poems

BY DENNIS O'NEIL
NEW ERA FEATURE WRITER

For Steve Evans, writing poetry has been a comforting way to cope with tragedy.

Evans, who grew up in Elkton, has written poems sporadically throughout his life. He started writing more intensely following a divorce in 2010. Some of his poems deal with personal tragedies such as the deaths of his stepfather and stepmother.

"I have had some people ask me why I don't write love poems and my answer is those feelings and emotions are easy for me to express," said Evans, 37. "The things that aren't easy to talk about that just linger in your head turn into my poems."

In August 2011, one of Evans' friends had a friend die in Texas. She asked Evans to write a poem to comfort the family. Evans said the family liked the poem so much that they incorporated it into the funeral service and later placed it beside the deceased's headstone.

Following the funeral, Evans' friend suggested he publish his own book of poems. Evans had never thought seriously about publishing anything before, but set to working on a collection of poems. He wrote most of them in a six-week period spanning late October to early December of last year.

Evans recently self-published the collection, titled "Eye of the Storm," through Shari Parker Publishing, based in New Boston, Texas. The collection is 72 pages long with 32 of his poems. Evans supplies a brief passage for each poem discussing their meaning for him.

Evans currently lives in Oklahoma with his father. He has lived in Elkton off and on over the years, but still has much family there. He said he is a little anxious regarding the collection's content, but is satisfied with the end result.

Indiana author to have signing for paranormal thriller in Hopkinsville

BY DENNIS O'NEIL

Studying the history of hypnosis as a teenager, Christopher Kokoski became fascinated with the life of Edgar Cayce.

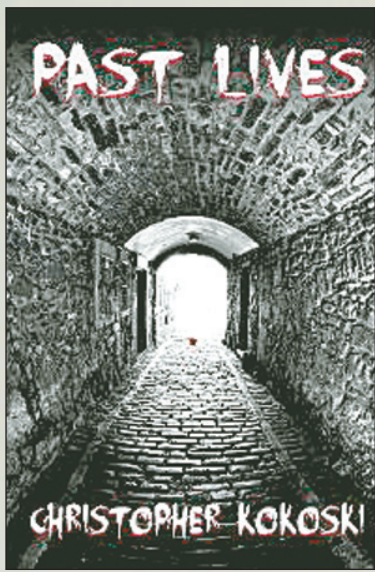

"I was fascinated with his ability to put himself under hypnosis," said Kokoski, 32. "He eventually started talking about reincarnation and how that was an internal conflict within him with him being a Christian. I really liked the conflict and controversy he created."

Kokoski's fascination with Cayce served him well when he went to write "Past Lives," which follows a man, Eric Shooter, who learns under hypnosis that he is a reincarnated serial killer. The story follows Shooter as he tries to avoid succumbing to the violence of his past life.

Kokoski said Cayce was on his mind as he wrote the book.

"The person that I visualized when I was reading about Cayce helped me create Eric Schutter," he said.

Kokoski grew up in Hopkinsville, attending Hopkinsville Middle School and Hopkinsville High School. He graduated from Murray State University in 2002 with a degree in organizational communication. He now lives in

School lunches to have more veggies, whole grains

BY MARY CLARE JALONICK
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — The first major nutritional overhaul of school meals in more than 15 years means most offerings — including the always popular pizza — will come with less sodium, more whole grains and a wider selection of fruits and vegetables on the side.

First lady Michelle Obama and Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack announced the new guidelines during a visit Wednesday with elementary students. Mrs. Obama, also joined by celebrity chef Rachael Ray, said youngsters will learn better if they don't have growling stomachs at school.

"As parents, we try to prepare decent meals, limit how much junk food our kids eat, and ensure they have a reasonably balanced diet," Mrs. Obama said. "And when we're putting in all that effort the last thing we want is for our hard work to be undone each day in the school cafeteria."

After the announcement, the three went through the line with students and ate turkey tacos with brown rice, black bean and corn salad and fruit — all Ray's recipes — with the children in the Parklawn Elementary lunchroom.

Under the new rules, pizza won't disappear from lunch lines, but will be made with healthier ingredients. Entire meals will have calorie caps for the first time and most trans fats will be banned. Sodium will gradually decrease over a 10 year period. Milk will have to be low in fat and flavored milks will have to be nonfat.

Despite the improvements, the new rules aren't as aggressive as the Obama administration had hoped. Congress last year blocked the Agriculture Department from making some of the desired changes, including limiting french fries and pizzas.

A bill passed in November would require the department to allow tomato paste on pizzas to be counted as a vegetable, as it is now. The initial draft of the department's guidelines, released a year ago, would have prevented that. Congress also blocked the department from limiting servings of potatoes to two servings a week. The final rules have incorporated those directions from Congress.

Among those who had sought the changes were potato growers and food companies that produce frozen pizzas for schools. Conservatives in Congress called the guidelines an overreach and said the government shouldn't tell children what to eat. School districts also objected to some of the requirements, saying they go too far and would cost too much.

The guidelines apply to lunches subsidized by the federal government. A child nutrition bill signed by President Barack Obama in 2010 will help school districts pay for some of the increased costs. Some of the changes will take place as soon as this September; others will be phased in over time.

While many schools are improving meals already, others still serve children meals high in fat, salt and calories. The guidelines are designed to combat childhood obesity and are based on 2009 recommendations by the Institute of Medicine, the health arm of the National Academy of Sciences.

Vilsack said food companies are reformulating many of the foods they sell to schools in anticipation of the changes.

"The food industry is already responding," he said. "This is a movement that has started, it's gaining momentum."

Diane Pratt-Heavner of the School Nutrition Association, which represents school lunch workers, said that many schools won't count pizza as a vegetable even though they can. Students qualifying for subsidized meals must have a certain number of vegetables and other nutritious foods on their lunch trays.

"Most schools are serving fruit or vegetables next to their pizza and some schools are even allowing unlimited servings of fruit or vegetables," Pratt-Heavner said.

Celebrity chef Ray said she thinks too much has been made of the availability of pizza and French fries. The new rules will make kids' lunch plates much more nutrient dense, she said.

"The overall picture is really good," she said. "This is a big deal."

The subsidized meals that would fall under the guidelines are served as free and low-cost meals to low-income children and long have been subject to government nutrition standards. The 2010 law will extend, for the first time, nutrition standards to other foods sold in schools that aren't subsidized by the federal government. That includes "a la carte" foods on the lunch line and snacks in vending machines.

Those standards, while expected to be similar, will be written separately and have not yet been proposed by the department.

Junk food in school cafeterias has been under attack for years. Now Colorado is considering the nation's toughest ban on unhealthy fats in school foods, a ban that could endanger pizza, french fries and other childhood favorites. Anniversary of miscarriage brings on grief

DEAR AMY: I had a miscarriage last year around this time. I was in a horrible state at first and then started cheering up, but now I'm starting to feel depressed about it again.

I don't know if it's because the anniversary of this miscarriage is coming up or what else it could be — but I don't know what to do.

Should I tell my family and friends or doctor? I just don't want to be depressed about it anymore. I have other kids to think about but I just can't stop thinking about the one I lost. What should I do? — Feeling Depressed

DEAR DEPRESSED: It is completely understandable that you would experience grief and sadness at this time — especially if you “held it together” for your children after your miscarriage.

Please, reach out to others, realizing that not all people are capable of responding. Some will try to erase your grief by insisting that you focus on the positive instead of understanding your pain.

Your doctor should understand and will prescribe medication or refer you to a therapist if she believes you are clinically depressed.

For many grieving people, knowing you are not alone is one key to healing. Your hospital will have information about local miscarriage support groups.

Read “I Never Held You: Miscarriage, Grief, Healing and Recovery,” by Ellen M. DuBois and Linda R. Backman (CreateSpace, 2006).

DEAR AMY: A couple of years ago, because of a falling-out over money we lent to our son, we were told that we were no longer welcome in our grandchildren's lives.

We continued to send monetary gifts to the two grandchildren for birthdays, Christmas and graduation, with no acknowledgment at all.

This year, the day after Christmas we received a phone call from our 18-year-old grandson saying that he'd received our Christmas card but there was nothing inside. He wondered if something had fallen out.

I advised him that nothing was inside but our “good wishes,” explaining that he was an “adult” now.

Because he sounded so pleasant and it was so nice to hear his voice after so long, I “chickened out” of telling him that we hadn't sent money because we have never been thanked for previous gifts of money.

We continued with a very pleasant “catching up with his life” conversation. Now I am feeling guilty about not sending him any money (although we are still sending it to his younger sister). — Torn

DEAR TORN: Your gifts and grants of money have caused nothing but trouble in your family, and yet the first thing that occurs to you after you've had a decent encounter with a family member is to reward him by sending money.

Can you build upon this encounter without shelling out cold, hard cash?

You have told this young man that he is an “adult.” Now respect him enough to tell the truth so that he might see the connection between his behavior and the consequences.

He needs to understand that if he had picked up the phone to say thank you, he might not have had to pick up the phone to ask, “Did my check fall out of the envelope?”

If he taps into his gratitude, you will be more likely to feel generous in the future. Contact him, be honest and say you'd love to stay in touch.

DEAR AMY: More feedback for “Bah Humbug.” I hope she follows her heart on how to celebrate the holidays next year.

My husband and I radically changed our celebration this year, each observing the season in our own way, and it was just lovely.

The sky didn't fall. Friends and relatives are still speaking to us, and we're certainly speaking to one another, smiling, and asking why we didn't do this sooner.

I suspect that Bah may just discover that, freed from a frantic baking/shopping/wrapping/decorating fiend of a wife full of resentments and expectations, her husband may come through with some heartfelt gestures to observe the season that she will truly appreciate.

That's what happened to us. — Happy New Year in Virginia

DEAR HAPPY: I've heard from many readers who had a serious case of the “Bahs” this year. Thank you for the inspiration to do things differently.

Keeping your heart in

We think of hearts during February because of Valentine's Day, but February is also designated as American Heart Month by the American Heart Association. Today is Wear Red Day. It's the day to wear your favorite red clothes or accessory, put on red lipstick or sport a red tie and red socks. Wear red in your own fashion to show your support for women and their fight against heart disease.

Heart disease is the number one killer of women in the United States. Each year, about 267,000 women die from heart attacks or other heart-related diseases.

Heart disease and heart attacks in women are commonly overlooked. Many women report early warning signs of an impending heart attack as early as a month before the attack occurs. Understanding the early warning signs of a heart attack will help decrease your chance of death. Some symptoms of heart attacks are:

- Unexplained, severe fatigue or trouble sleeping, especially for an extended period of time.
- Persistent, indigestion-like pain in the chest.
- Pain that is worse with activity but decreases with rest.
- Pain along with sweating, nausea, vomiting or shortness of breath.
- Pain or dull ache under arms, jaw area, neck or back.

The American Heart Association recommends that even if you are not sure that your symptoms may be from a heart attack, have them checked out. In this situation, every minute matters. Calling 911 and emergency medical treatment is usually the fastest way to get lifesaving treatment.

Emergency medical service paramedics will begin treatment immediately when they arrive and are trained to revive someone in the event their heart has stopped. If you can't get emergency medical services, have someone drive you to the hospital. Don't drive yourself unless there is absolutely no other option.

Heart disease does not care if you are male or female, rich or poor. It is an equal opportunity killer: You don't have to be a statistic. You can't change your age, gender, ethnicity or family history, but there are some things that you can do and some changes that you can make:

- Stop smoking.
- Keep your cholesterol level low.
- Adopt a healthy diet that is low in fat and high in fruit, vegetables and fiber.
- Lose weight.
- Keep your blood pressure in check.
- Engage in regular physical activity.
- Ask your doctor about taking an aspirin a day.
- Reduce your stress level.

Healthy lifestyle habits can help you to reduce your risk of developing cardiovascular disease and help to prevent a heart attack or stroke. A healthy heart is just a beat away.

British actor Daniel Radcliffe greets fans on Tuesday, as he arrives for the world premiere of The Woman in Black at the Royal Festival Hall in central London.

Daniel Radcliffe dishes on post ‘Potter’ life

NEW YORK (AP) — Daniel Radcliffe had to decide what his first starring film role would be after the “Harry Potter” franchise ended in 2011, and he didn't make that decision lightly.

Despite demonstrating his acting range by starring in “Equus” and “How to Succeed in Business” on Broadway, the pressure was on for Radcliffe to prove he could play more than Potter on the big screen.

He chose “The Woman in Black,” a dark thriller about a recently widowed father who is haunted by his wife's death. The movie will be in theaters Feb. 3.

“I never expected the first thing I did after ‘Potter’ to be a horror film or anything like that. That was one of the reasons it was intriguing to me as well because it was so unexpected,” Radcliffe said in a recent interview. He also talked about growing up fast, getting praise from actor Sean Connery, who starred in James Bond films, and why he isn't ready to marry his longtime girlfriend.

AP: You knew the world was watching to see what movie you picked after “Harry Potter” ended. Why did you decide on “The Woman in Black”?

Radcliffe: This film is a film that has a great story but it is driven by characters at the heart of it. It fit in perfectly. It was going to be filming when I was on break from finishing “Potter” and starring in “How to Succeed,” so it was perfectly timed out. Also, when I was reading the script, I was surprised to be enjoying a horror film because I have never gravitated towards that in my own life.

New federal map for what to plant reflects warming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Global warming is hitting not just home, but garden. The government's colorful map of planting zones, most often seen on the back of seed packets, is changing, illustrating a hotter 21st century.

An update of the official guide for 80 million gardeners reflects a new reality: The coldest day of the year isn't as cold as it used to be. So some plants and trees that once seemed too vulnerable to cold can now survive farther north.

It's the first time since 1990 that the U.S. Department of Agriculture has updated the map and much has changed. Nearly entire states, such as Ohio, Nebraska and Texas, are in warmer zones.

The new guide, unveiled Wednesday at the National Arboretum, also uses better weather data and offers more interactive technology. For the first time it takes into factors such as how cities are hotter than suburbs and rural areas, nearby large bodies of water, prevailing winds, and the slope of land.

"It truly does reflect state of the art," said USDA chief scientist Catherine Woteki.

Gardeners can register their zip code into the online map and their zone will pop up. It shows the exact average coldest temperature for each zip code. The 26 zones, however, are based on five degree increments.

For example, Des Moines, Iowa, used to be in zone 5a, meaning the lowest temperature on average was between minus 15 and minus 20 degrees Fahrenheit. Now it's 5b, which has a coldest temperature of 10 to 15 degrees below zero.

"People who grow plants are well aware of the fact that temperatures have gotten more mild throughout the year, particularly in the winter time," said Boston University biology professor Richard Primack. "There's a lot of things you can grow now that you couldn't grow before."

He uses the giant fig tree in his suburban Boston yard as an example.

"People don't think of figs as a crop you can grow in the Boston area. You can do it now," he said.

In the old 1990 map, the USDA mentions 34 different U.S. cities on its key. Eighteen of those, including Honolulu, St. Louis, Des Moines, St. Paul and even Fairbanks, are in newer warmer zones. Agriculture officials said they didn't examine the map to see how much of the map has changed for the hotter. But Mark Kaplan, the New York meteorologist who co-created the 1990 map and a 2003 update that the USDA didn't use, said the latest version clearly shows warmer zones migrating north. Other experts agreed.

The 1990 map was based on temperatures from 1974 to 1986; the new map from 1976 to 2005. The nation's average temperature from 1976 to 2005 was two-thirds of a degree warmer than for the old time period, according to statistics at the National Climatic Data Center.

USDA spokeswoman Kim Kaplan, who was part of the map team, repeatedly tried to distance the new zones in the map from global warming issues. She said even though much of the country is in warmer zones, the map "is simply not a good instrument" to demonstrate climate change because it is based on just the coldest days of the year.

David W. Wolfe, professor of plant and soil ecology in Cornell University's Department of Horticulture said the USDA is being too cautious and disagrees with Kaplan about whether this reflects warming.

"At a time when the 'normal' climate has become a moving target, this revision of the hardiness zone map gives us a clear picture of the 'new normal,' and will be an essential tool for gardeners, farmers, and natural resource managers as they begin to cope with rapid climate change," Wolfe said in an email.

Who wears the pants in the kitchen?

When was the last time you said to yourself, "I can't cook steamed broccoli and baked sweet potatoes, they will never eat it"? You may not have thought those specific foods, but you get what I mean. We cook or provide our family with the foods that we think they will eat and the foods that they openly express that they like to eat. Whether you are a dad, a mom, a wife, a husband or any other caregiver in charge of cooking or providing your family with meals, you have more power than you think.

During World War II, Margret Mead, along with the Committee on Food Habits of the National Research Council, conducted a simple study to determine who the nutrition gatekeeper was in the typical home. Of course, women were most often the ones in the kitchen in that time period, whereas today that is not always the case. When the women in the WWII era were asked about their control over what was eaten in the household, they responded that their husband and/or children controlled what was served and eaten with their approval or disapproval.

To avoid disapproval, the women felt that they must woman purchased, grew, baked or bartered for all of the food brought into the house, the men and children felt that the woman controlled what was served and eaten. They added that they would most likely eat anything that was served. It was decided then that the woman of the household was the nutrition gatekeeper.

In 2005, another study was done similar to the one conducted during the WWII era and similar results were found. Although much has changed since 1940s, there is still a nutrition gatekeeper in every home. According to the Journal of the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics, 72 percent of what is eaten in and away from the home is controlled by the nutrition gatekeeper of the home. Yet many nutrition gatekeepers are like the women in the WWII era and do not recognize their power.

As childhood obesity is on the rise and the number of persons diagnosed with diabetes grows daily, I wonder who is in control? We live in a world overtaken with media — advertisements run every minute of the day and fast food chains spend billions of dollars marketing their not-so-healthy health foods to you and your children. It may seem like moving Mount Everest would be easier than not going through the drive thru of their favorite fast food joint. But answer this, which is more important: the disappointment that will last all of five minutes because you aren't eating a cheeseburger, or the health of our family and the lack of time we will have with them if these bad habits continue?

The nutrition gatekeepers of the family hold 72 percent of control over the foods eaten in and away from the home. This is done through influence and routine. Do not relinquish your control because you doubt it or because you cannot control 100 percent of what your family eats. Giving up and throwing in the towel only means that you will negatively impact that 72 percent that you do influence. It is critical that the nutrition gatekeepers realize their control and use it wisely, because without it, our nutritional health will continue to fall.

Looking beyond white pine

Because of white pine decline and other pest issues, many gardeners are looking for alternatives to white pine (pinus strobus) such as screening, wind-breaks or aesthetics in west Kentucky. The trouble is few evergreens grow as fast as white pine or are as readily available. One solution might be to simply diversify.

Although a long row of pine can be attractive, if a threatening disease or insect becomes an issue in your landscape, you may end up replacing some or all of that tree line. By mixing white pine with several other evergreens, you can reduce your risks and still have a pleasing landscape. The following are a few recommended evergreens for our area with qualities worthy of a place in your landscape.

Just a couple of weeks ago, I wrote about cryptomeria japonica, or "yoshino," Japanese cryptomeria, the 2012 Theodore Klein winner. It is a fast-growing, upright and finely textured evergreen that would make a great replacement for white pine. Expect a height of 30 to 40 feet. Poor drainage, compacted soils and drought, factors contributing to white pine decline, offer little challenge to Japanese cryptomeria.

Another commonly used replacement for white pine is eastern arborvitae, or "emerald green" (thuja plicata). It is adaptable to many urban stress situations and tends to be fairly low-maintenance. Spidermites and bagworms can be of some concern and should be monitored. Heavy snow or ice loads can also cause severe damage to arborvitae's closely held branches. It should mature to about 20 feet tall by 8 feet wide.

For something a little different, nordmann fir (abies normanniana) and oriental spruce (picea orientalis) do well in west Kentucky. Oriental spruce grows to 50 to 60 feet in a pyramidal form with dense foliage of short, stiff needles. It is much longer-lived than Colorado blue spruce in our area as it is less prone to disease. It would however benefit from a planting site protected from harsh winter winds. Nordmann Fir is by far the best fir species for Kentucky and some would say the handsomest of the genus. Expect a height of 60 to 80 feet in the landscape. Nordmann performs best in full sun with moist soil. Because of its formal shape, it adds a sense of elegance to any landscape. Both oriental spruce and nordmann fir are previous Theodore Klein winners, but both are slower growers than white pine.

If privacy is not an issue, shawnee brave baldcypress (taxodium distichum, "Shawnee Brave") and dawn redwood (metasequoia glyptostroboides) are great deciduous conifers.

Shawnee brave baldcypress is very tolerant of environmental conditions and is known for its "knees," which only form when the roots are growing in wet sites.

However, it is equally at home in more dry cultivated sites. It should grow to 75 feet tall in a narrow pyramidal habit. Dawn redwood has a similar size and form as baldcypress and at first glance, the two could be mistaken for each other.

Dawn redwood is a faster grower and has attractive exfoliating reddish-brown bark. Both have deciduous foliage that resemble soft needles but turn reddish brown and drop off in the fall. They are also readily available in the nursery trade.

Many times the success of a tree comes down to putting the right plant in the right place. For more information on tree selection or planting, contact the Christian County Cooperative Extension Service at 270-886-6328.

Trenton church struggles to survive with dwindling membership

Trenton church struggles to survive with dwindling membership

There is a beautiful little church in Trenton that needs to be saved.

When passing through the south Todd County town, you no doubt have noticed the stone Gothic church on the left as you travel south. It is the first church you will see when coming into town.

Established in 1900, the Trenton Presbyterian Church is now functioning with only six active members.

The future is very uncertain for this building that is a jewel in the heart of Trenton.

Betty Nabb Coots, who now serves as treasurer and is following in the footsteps of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nabb, who for many years were active in the church and served as deacons, is among those still active. She said several years ago, the church sold their parsonage, and that money has been invested. For the time being, utilities and operational costs are being financed from interest on those investments.

Services are still conducted Sunday with Sunday school at 10 a.m. followed by a worship service at 11 a.m.

A lay minister, Mike Bourland, comes each week from Madisonville to preach and is at the church every Saturday from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. if anyone wants to discuss church business.

In addition, another lay minister, Bill Farr, comes periodically from Paducah to administer sacraments.

The church was organized in 1900 at the home of C. E. Burge. James William Chesnut, one of the founding members who served as an elder, is credited with purchasing beautiful stained glass windows which grace the church.

Legend has it that the windows were being transported by rail to a church construction site further north, and Chesnut purchased the windows while the train was stopped in Trenton and they were dedicated to members of his family.

An extension which houses a fellowship hall, kitchen and minister's study was added on to the back of the church and dedicated in 1960 to the late Miss Carrie Harrel, whose endowment to the church made the building possible.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Thompson Harrel, charter members of the church. Miss Carrie is said to have dedicated her life to the Trenton church.

The speaker at the new building dedication was the Rev. Russell G. Bisnett, and the organist was Margaret B. Rash of Hopkinsville.

Other founding elders were Samuel David and Charles Edgar Burge.

The church was dedicated at its present site in 1902, with church members managing to pay the debt by 1910.

The sanctuary is impressive with a lofty ceiling, but it has never been blessed with a large enough congregation to fill its rows of pews.

There are five rows in the center section and six between aisles and the windows.

The membership has never exceeded 50 parishioners.

The site is accented by an iron fence at the front.

Among other gifts to the church in past years was a Hammond organ given by Dillard Payne, son of Mr. and Mrs. F.D. Payne. The senior Payne was an elder and church treasurer; and his wife was a teacher of women's Bible classes and a leader in the women's auxiliary.

The future of the church is of great concern to the small group of worshippers.

Among options that have been discussed is to have it used as a wedding chapel, but when asked what they were going to do, Betty simply said, "I don't know."

Stop and worship some Sunday. You'll long remember the beauty of the little house of the Lord and marvel at the dedication of such a very few to keep its doors open.

California wine country getaways for two

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — You like chocolate. You like warm baths. But are you ready for a milk chocolate bath for two?

That's just one of the options available in California wine country, where escaping with your honey can be as down-to-earth, or as decadent, as you make it.

Want to sip sparkling wine on a terrace with a view? Stage your own Cinderella story on the ramparts of a fairy tale castle? Or maybe you fancy taking a spin around the salsa floor.

With Valentine's Day around the corner, here's a rundown of seven things to do for two in the Napa Valley, with price tags ranging from OK-if-you're-broke to go-for-broke.

TASTE THE GOOD LIFE:

There are a number of tasting rooms in downtown Napa including Back Room Wines, where the lineup changes frequently, and Vintners' Collective, which represents a number of wineries. The Vintner's Collective tasting room is housed in a renovated historic stone building that has served time as a brewery, saloon, brothel, laundry and meat company — but not all at the same time.

SATURDAY (SALSA) NIGHT FEVER:

Bistro Sabor in downtown Napa offers reasonably priced Latin American street food like fire-roasted chile relleno, a Poblano chile stuffed with cheese, beans and rice. And from 10 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. on Saturday nights they fire up the salsa, merengue and other music, no cover charge required.

MAKE YOUR FEELINGS CRYSTAL CLEAR:

Sure, you may have seen a wine cellar or two. But have you seen a Crystal Cellar? With stainless steel walls, a mirrored bar and a collection of historic crystal decanters, not to mention a fabulous chandelier, from Bacarat? All this and more awaits at Raymond Vineyards, where your visit to the Cellar includes Earth & Air, a class about the importance of aerating wine.

Exhibit explores Jefferson’s slave ownership

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thomas Jefferson wrote “all men are created equal” to declare U.S. independence from Britain, yet he was also a lifelong slave owner who freed only nine of his more than 600 slaves during his lifetime.

That contradiction between ideals and reality is at the center of a new exhibit that opened Friday as the Smithsonian Institution continues developing a national black history museum. It offers a look at Jefferson’s Monticello plantation in Virginia through the lives of six slave families and artifacts unearthed from where they lived.

The exhibit, “Slavery at Jefferson’s Monticello: Paradox of Liberty,” was developed with Monticello and will be on view at the National Museum of American History through mid-October. It includes a look at the family of Sally Hemings, a slave. Most historians now believe she had an intimate relationship with the third president and that he fathered her children.

Museum Director Lonnie Bunch said his staff can test ideas by building exhibits before the National Museum of African American History and Culture is finished.

It will be the first museum added to the National Mall since 2004. A groundbreaking is planned for Feb. 22, and it’s scheduled to open in 2015 near the Washington Monument.

Bunch said museum officials want to see how the public responds to subjects, such as slavery, as they try to present history for the widest possible audience.

Slavery, he said, is still the “last great unmentionable” in public discourse but central in shaping American history.

“This is a story we know we have to tell, and this is a story we know is going to be difficult and going to be challenging, but this new museum has to tell the story,” he told The Associated Press. “In many ways, the Smithsonian is the great legitimizer, so if we can wrestle with slavery and Jefferson, other people can.”

A portion of the exhibit devoted to the Hemings-Jefferson story marks the first time the subject has been presented on the National Mall.

Curators stopped short of making a definitive statement in the exhibit about the relationship, but they wrote that it was likely an intimate one, based on documentary and genetic evidence.

“On the one hand it’s not a breakthrough for scholars. We’ve known this for a long time,” Bunch said. “I think that the public is still trying to understand it.”

Many artifacts, including tools and kitchen ceramics, are on public view for the first time, exploring the work and lives of slave families who lived on Jefferson’s plantation. Among the pieces on display is a hand-crafted chair built by John Hemings, Sally Hemings’ brother, to replicate a set of French chairs at Monticello.

While such items may have been seen by 450,000 people a year at Monticello, they are accessible to millions of visitors at the Smithsonian, curators said.

In the exhibit, oral histories from descendants of Jefferson’s slaves reveal stories passed down through families for generations, along with detailed records kept by Jefferson.

For example, Jefferson bought George and Ursula Granger and their sons as slaves in 1773, and Ursula became a “favorite housewoman” of his wife. Jefferson eventually made George Granger the overseer of Monticello, the only slave to rise to that position and receive an annual wage.

Later, the first baby born in the White House was the son of Wormley and Ursula Hughes, who belonged to Jefferson.

“We can begin to understand slavery, not as an abstraction but through the stories of individuals and families who were surviving within a system that denied their humanity,” said Leslie Green Bowman, president of the Thomas Jefferson Foundation that runs Monticello.

A related website will showcase the “Getting Word” oral history project.

Curators also explore the importance of slavery in early U.S. history and Jefferson’s views on enslavement, which he called an “abominable crime.”

The small laptop portable desk he used to draft the Declaration of Independence is placed front and center in the exhibit, borrowed from the Smithsonian’s permanent presidential gallery.

Shannon Lanier, 32, of New York City, a ninth generation descendant of Jefferson and Hemings through their son Madison Hemings, said he has known about his ancestors for years from stories told by his mother and grandmother.

Having such an exhibit at the Smithsonian is a breakthrough, he said, because it’s past time for more people to know about Jefferson’s history with slavery.

“This is a great catalyst for conversation,” he said, standing near a bronze statue of Jefferson. “It’s really hard for people to understand slavery and Thomas Jefferson. He was a president, why couldn’t he set them free?”

“This helps enlighten people about ... how complex it was.”

Bill Webb of New York City learned only in 2006 that his ancestor Brown Colbert was a slave connected to Monticello as the grandson of Elizabeth Hemings, Sally Hemings’ mother — a discovery he called “mind blowing.”

“On any research that you do, I think it’s exciting. But with slavery, it’s certainly disturbing sometimes,” he said. “But it’s fact. It’s good to know from whence one comes.”

As for Jefferson, Webb said he was “a product of his time.”

Until the mid-1980s, Monticello avoided the difficult topic of slavery. But decades of research and archaeology at the site helped piece together a fuller picture of slave life, said Monticello Curator Elizabeth Chew.

“Twenty years ago, we could not have done this show,” she said.

Pitt to attend New Orleans homebuilding gala

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Talk show host Ellen Degeneres and “American Idol” judge Randy Jackson are hosting a star-studded gala in New Orleans to benefit Brad Pitt’s Make It Right home rebuilding effort.

Pitt will attend the $1,000-per-person gala on March 10 called “A Night to Make It Right,” which will include performances by singers Sheryl Crow, Rihanna, Seal and Dr. John, said foundation spokeswoman Taylor Royle.

Pitt launched Make It Right in 2007 to help Lower 9th Ward residents who lost their homes during Hurricane Katrina in 2005. The Lower 9th Ward was one of the hardest-hit neighborhoods when Katrina caused levees to fail, inundating roughly 80 percent of the city with floodwater.

Pitt worked with architects to come up with designs for stronger, safer and more energy-efficient houses than the ones residents lost.

So far 75 homes have been built, six more are under construction and construction is set to begin on roughly eight others in coming months.

“Our goal is 150 houses, and this fundraiser is going to help us reach that goal,” said Royle, noting that all proceeds will benefit Make It Right.

Royle said it has taken more time and money than the foundation originally thought to build 150 homes.

Getting in touch with families, making decisions about their homes, getting finances in order and clearing paperwork takes months, she said.

“It’s been a long road to get these families home,” Royle said. “But we’re happy with our progress, and we’re looking forward to celebrating the progress we’ve made.”

Royle said a video of Make It Right’s work over the past four years will be presented at the gala. A four-course dinner organized by chef John Besh will include courses by chefs Emeril Lagasse and Giada de Laurentiis.

Degeneres, a New Orleans native, has already donated more than $2 million to Make It Right.

“She’s been one of our biggest supporters,” Royle said.

Jackson, a Baton Rouge native, was quick to offer his participation in the event, Royle said.

Other celebrities serving on the event’s host committee who may also be attending include actors Josh Brolin, Sean Penn and Kevin Spacey and director Spike Lee.

Westminster introduces 6 new breeds to competition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Six dogs will make history this year as the newest breeds eligible to compete at Westminster. If they have visions of winning, though, history is against them.

The names of some of these rookie breeds competing in this year's Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show on Feb. 13-14 at Madison Square Garden are a mouthful: the Entlebucher mountain dog, the Norwegian Lundehund, the American English coonhound, the Finnish Lapphund, the Cesky terrier and the Xoloitzcuintli, previously known as the Mexican Hairless.

The six new breeds bring to 185 the number that will compete this year for the best of show grand prize in the annual contest, the oldest sporting event in the United States next to the Kentucky Derby, said David Frei, the club's director of communications and the USA Network show host.

In 1990, there were 142 eligible breeds.

This is no limit on the number of new breeds that can be admitted each year, but there are strict criteria. For the last 12 years, no more than six rookies have been approved in any year, Frei said.

Before the American Kennel Club will approve a new breed, there must be a significant number of the dogs in the United States as well as a breed club to oversee enthusiasts and geographic diversity.

The rookies will compete with all the other dogs but they won't be a good bet to win best in show.

Frei said the rookie that rose to the top and became best in show fastest was the Bichon Frise. That breed made its debut in 1974 and was named best of show in 2001, a 27-year gap.

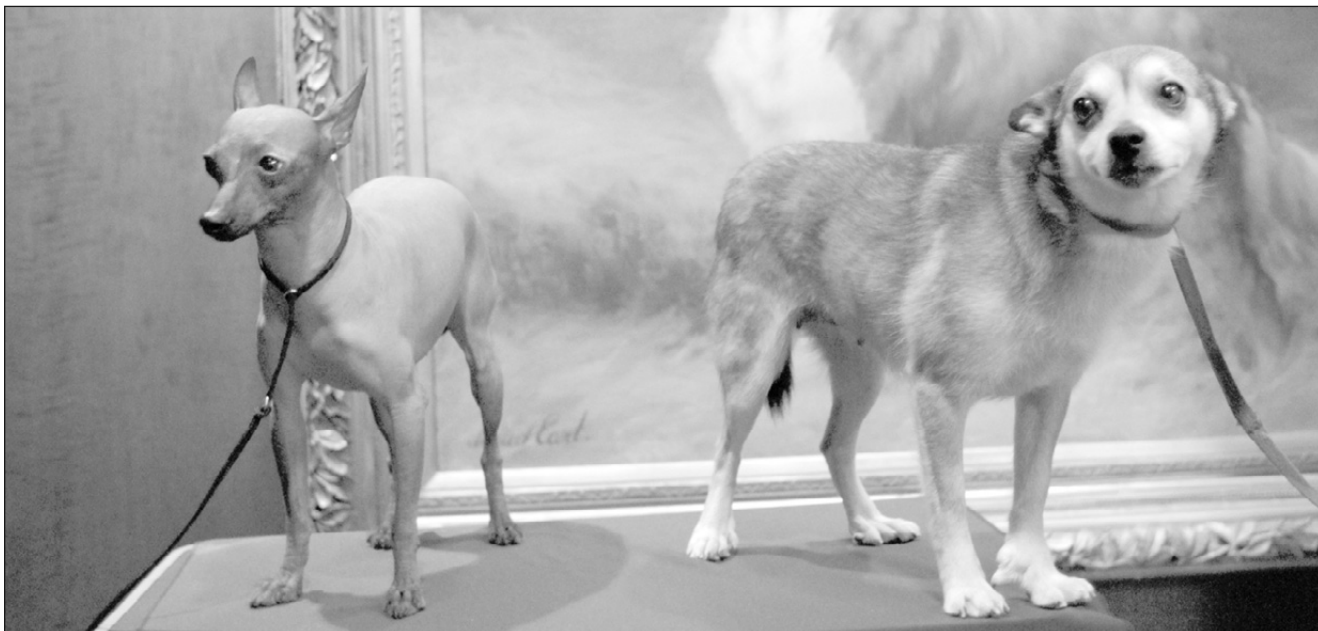

The AKC provided these thumbnail sketches of this year's rookie breeds:

■ The American English coonhound is a descendant of the English foxhound and evolved from Virginia hounds. Originally used to hunt fox by day and raccoon by night, they were once called the English fox and coonhound.

The breed is pleasant, alert, confident and sociable with both humans and dogs. The modern version of the dog is a speedy, durable and wide-ranging hunter.

It is represented by the American English Coonhound Association.

■ The Entlebucher mountain dog is a native of Switzerland and the smallest of the four AKC Swiss breeds. Prized for its work ethic and ease of training, this dog can easily switch from high-spirited playmate to serious, self-assured dog with a commanding presence. This is not a good dog for the casual owner because it needs so much socialization and will remain active and energetic all its life.

Namina (left) a Mexican Xoloitzcuintli, and Eowyn, a Norwegian Lundehund, appear Thursday during a news conference at The American Kennel Club in New York. Six breeds will make history this year as the newest breeds eligible to compete at the Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show.

It is sponsored by the National Entlebucher Mountain Dog Association.

■ The Finnish Lapphund is a reindeer herding dog from the northern parts of Scandinavia. It is thought that this breed existed for hundreds, if not thousands, of years as a helper dog to native tribes. Today, they are popular as family pets in their native Finland. Devoted to their family, they are friendly with all people, highly intelligent and eager to learn. They are strong but very agile.

They are represented by the Finnish Lapphund Club of America.

■ The Norwegian Lundehund is also called the puffin dog. It spent centuries on the rocky cliffs and high fields of arctic Norway hunting and retrieving puffin birds, which was an important meat and feather crop to local farmers.

This dog has at least six toes on each foot so it can handle the almost vertical areas where puffins nest. It also has a flexible skeletal structure that enables it to squirm out of tight spots or go spread eagle to prevent slips and falls.

Today's version of the dog is an alert, cheerful and somewhat mischievous companion.

It is represented by the Norwegian Lundehund Club of America, Inc.

■ The Xoloitzcuintli is the national dog of Mexico and was previously known as the Mexican Hairless. It comes in three sizes and there is a coated version seen only in the United States and Canada. These dogs are descendants of the hairless dogs prized by the Aztecs and revered as guardians of the dead.

Living in the Mexican jungles, they were shaped by their environment. Their intelligence, trainability and natural cleanliness have turned them into unique and valued pets.

It is sponsored by the Xoloitzcuintli Club of America.

■ The Cesky terrier is a well-muscled, short legged hunting terrier that can be worked in packs. With natural drop ears and a natural tail, it is longer than it is tall and has a long, soft, silky coat that can be any shade of gray from charcoal to platinum.

Lean and graceful, the dogs are reserved toward strangers but loyal to their owners and always keen and alert during a hunt.

This breed is sponsored by the American Cesky Terrier Fanciers Association.

"Past Lives" is Kokoski's first novel and the first installement of a three-part series. He recently finished the first draft of the series' second book. He also has another book, "Dark Halo," set for release this year through his publishing company, Blackwyrn Publishing.

While he doesn't believe in past lives, Kokoski thought the idea would be an interesting starting point for a series.

"Most people when they think of their past lives imagine themselves as someone famous," he said. "I thought, 'what would happen if someone found out they were something terrible like one of the world's worst serial killers?'"

Kokoski is a Christian who has also authored and self-published a book on prayer called "101 Ways to Pray Better and Get Faster Results." He hopes "Past Lives" will stimulate discussion among readers about spiritual topics.

"It's interesting to go from a prayer book to a series like this," Kokoski said with a laugh. "I'm hoping (the book) will trigger discussion about what people believe. It's a positive thing to have those kinds of conversations."

Kokoski will return to Hopkinsville Feb. 4 for a book signing at the Hopkinsville-Christian County Public Library. The signing will last from 10 to 10:45 a.m.

WEEKLY HEALTH TOPIC

by Dr. John Colby, M.D.

Transient ischemic attacks or TIAs are caused by small clots in arteries that supply blood to a section of the brain. Possible symptoms include but are not restricted to sudden loss of vision, numbness/weakness on one side and alteration of speech. Sometimes these symptoms will come on and then go away on their own and people tend to ignore them. That is a big mistake. These symptoms are warning signs that need to be taken seriously.

Blood is a lot like water, and just like a log jam in a river is most likely to form at a narrow place, so clots form in narrowed arteries. Clots most frequently occur in arteries that have been narrowed by an underlying disease process. High blood pressure narrows the arteries because they have to thicken their walls to compensate for the extra pressure. High fats such as cholesterol or triglycerides form islands on the inside of arteries, especially at branch points where there is high turbulence. Nicotine causes thickening of the arterial walls because of a chemical reaction. Uncontrolled diabetes accelerates the aging process and hardens the arteries prematurely.

No matter what the cause, though, the results are the same. As narrowing worsens, the blood flow is impeded, similar to a river which has narrows and rocks which results in turbulence and rapids. These are the conditions which Increase the risk of blood clots which produce TIAs or strokes. The body has its own mechanism for breaking up clots and re-establishing blood flow and if the blood flow is reestablished in time, the brain resumes normal function.

Turkish film highlights gay honor killing

ANKARA, Turkey — Shortly after telling his parents he was gay, Ahmet Yildiz was gunned down inside his car by his father in Istanbul. It was Turkey's first officially recognized gay "honor killing."

An award-winning film partly inspired by Yildiz's story, which opened in dozens of cinemas across Turkey last week, is putting the spotlight on gays in a Muslim country that is seeking European Union membership but remains influenced by conservative and religious values.

The film "Zenne Dancer" — or male belly dancer — is not the nation's first gay-themed movie but is the first to explore the little-known phenomenon of men killed by family members for being gay. So-called honor killings in Turkey usually target women accused of disgracing the family.

"Our main aim was to convey Ahmet's story, but by doing so we also wanted to expose the pressure the (gay and lesbian community) faces from their family, the society and the state," said Mehmet Binay, who co-directed and produced the film with his partner, Caner Alper. "Zenne Dancer" won four awards at Turkey's coveted Antalya Golden Orange Film Festival this year, including best First Film and Best Cinematography. Erkan Avci, who plays Yildiz's character, won Best Supporting Actor. The movie was also recently chosen a Best Film by an association of Turkish film critics.

Yildiz, a physics student at Istanbul's Marmara University, was shot dead on July 15, 2008, after he went out for an ice cream break while studying at home for his final exams.

An arrest warrant has been issued for his father, Yahya Yildiz, who has been charged in absentia for the murder. The father, who has been on the run for three years, is believed to be in hiding in northern Iraq.

Yildiz, who was a close friend of Binay and Alper, came from the conservative, mostly Kurdish Saniurfa province, where homosexuality is taboo and where officials have been struggling to stem the practice of honor killings of women.

Women there have been killed for flirting or having a boyfriend without the family's consent.

Gay honor killings are believed to be common in Turkey's conservative heartland. But Yildiz's murder was the first in Turkey to be reported by authorities as a gay honor killing.

Binay said Yildiz's family suspected his homosexuality but believed he could be treated by imams and were pressuring him to return to Saniurfa.

"He was killed shortly before, told them he would not be cured, would not return and that he was considering leaving for Germany where he might marry (his girlfriend)," he said.

In "Zenne Dancer," Yildiz's life is intertwined with the stories of two other male characters — a flamboyant Zenne dancer named Can and a bisexual German photographer, Daniel.

A stranger to Turkey's conservative traditions, Daniel encourages Yildiz to come out to his parents, insisting honesty was the best way to deal with his family.

The Booker T. Washington school has a long way to go before it's ready to open its doors.

Gala proceeds to benefit former school

BY DENNIS O'NEIL
NEW ERA FEATURE WRITER

Since purchasing the former Booker T. Washington School in late 2010, Cedar Grove Baptist Church has done $100,000 worth of renovations, painting, repairing bathrooms and laying tile for flooring.

With so much complete though, Deborah Baker, an organizer on the project, said they are still only halfway home, needing another $100,000 to complete necessary repairs on the Second Street structure.

"We have come a long way, but we have a long way to go," Baker said of the project.

The church purchased the school in the hope of turning it into a community center. They hope to offer programs for area youth and rent out office space for local agencies and organizations.

Baker said they want to have an area for dance and art activities as well as a computer lab and an office area. They still need to purchase air and heating units for each room as well as computer and office equipment. She said the roof also needs repair.

"We need a little bit of everything," she said.

Baker said the repairs thus far have been funded through private donations. The church will have a fundraising gala on Feb. 10 at the James E. Bruce Convention Center with all money benefiting the renovations. Tickets for the event will be $25 and there will be a silent auction for patrons. Members of the school's alumni will be honored in a ceremony at the event.

The Rev. Aaron Pettus, assistant pastor at the church, said the idea for the fundraiser came from the church's board of directors. He hopes it will help them come closer to completing the facility's repairs.

"We are hopeful it will be completed pretty soon," Pettus said. "It will all depend on how much we can do and how much we can raise."

Baker hopes they can raise at least $25,000 with the fundraiser. She said they want the new center to be a great asset to the community.

"We plan to house things in there to empower people and empower the community," she said. "To build up the city. We definitely want to be an avenue for the city."

The fundraiser will start at 7 p.m. For more information, call the church at 270-886-0577.

A wife recalls with fondness sharing coffee with her husband

STORY BY LISA PAWLAK
"CHICKEN SOUP FOR THE SOUL: FOOD AND LOVE"

When I first met my husband, Geno, he lived in a garage. You may be thinking that he lived in a garage that had been converted into an actual room with real walls and some proper insulation, but that wasn't the case.

It was just a regular old garage — the only modification being a large gray carpet scrap on the ground to keep the concrete from feeling quite so cold.

Despite the lack of luxury accommodations, I would spend the nights with him there in the garage, huddled under the blankets, completely smitten. In the mornings, we would wake up and enter the actual house. We'd go into the kitchen, where, with lavish attention to detail, Geno would make me coffee.

In the early years of our dating — before we got married, before the careers, before our two kids and before illness ever touched our lives — back in the days when we both seemed to have a lot more time and energy, the act of Geno making my morning coffee was quite elaborate.

First, Geno would grind the espresso beans fresh. Then he would carefully pack them into a European-style stovetop espresso maker, which was a complicated contraption of filters, seals and various parts that I never could seem to put together properly. As we waited for the coffee to percolate, he would separately heat up two mugs of milk in the microwave. When the coffee had bubbled and brewed, he added it to the steaming milk, creating delicious homemade lattes.

Back then, Starbucks wasn't around, and finding a good latte wasn't as simple as driving to the nearest shopping center. Geno's lattes were the best in town, and I started my days feeling satiated by my coffee's warmth.

As time went on and our overall lives became more complicated, the coffee routine simplified.

After we got married, my parents gave us a fancy Italian espresso machine. We loved it, but who had time to actually use it? So after a while, we bought a regular old Mr. Coffee coffeemaker. We replaced the glass pots when we broke them, which was frequently. Sometimes we even bought the beans preground.

After 15 years of sharing our morning coffee and our daily lives, we temporarily uprooted our family and moved to Spain. This was a result of Geno having achieved a six-month sabbatical from his university position.

When we arrived in Spain, we were charmed when we opened the kitchen cabinets of our furnished apartment. "Look at this!" Geno exclaimed, holding up a tarnished espresso maker. It was a stovetop European-style, the exact same type that Geno had used when he first started making me coffee 15 years earlier.

While in Spain external pressures of our typical day-to-day existences simply vanished, and we went back to the essence of our relationship.

And each day, as he had throughout our lives together, Geno made my coffee.

He once again made my coffee slowly and elaborately — just as he had when we were in our early 20s. There was no Starbucks in Granada, the city in which we were living, and while Spanish espresso is generally quite good, Geno's lattes were still the best.

When we left Spain, we returned home — and we returned to reality. We also returned to our regular old Mr. Coffee coffeemaker — which these days boasts an unbreakable stainless-steel pot.

Our lives have changed throughout our years together, but one thing has always remained constant. Every morning, as Geno makes my coffee, I am reminded of my husband's exceptional richness, warmth and love.

Only God can give us the strength to live as we should

DEAR REV. GRAHAM: I suppose you get letters like this every year, but I made a long list of New Year's resolutions this year and in less than a week I've broken them all. There wasn't anything wrong with them, and they would have made me a better person, but why can't I keep them? — G. McF.

DEAR G.McF.: Sometimes the reason people can't keep their New Year's resolutions is because they weren't really resolutions at all — they were only wishes. If we don't take practical steps to make our resolutions come true, they never will.

But there is a deeper problem we all face, and that is our inability to do what we know we ought to do. Just as someone with a broken leg can't compete in a race, so someone with a broken soul can't live the way they should. And unfortunately, we all have broken souls or spirits — an inner weakness that keeps us from living the way we should. The apostle Paul put it this way: "I have the desire to do what is good, but I cannot carry it out" (Romans 7:18).

What is the problem? The problem is that sin, like a crippling disease, has invaded our lives and weakened our souls. That's why we need God, for only He can change us from within and give us the strength to live the way we should. And He will, as we open our hearts and lives to Jesus Christ and submit our wills to His will.

Don't try to live without God. You need Him — and He wants to help you, because He loves you. Don't let your pride, or anything else, keep you from Christ. He alone gives us hope — hope of a better life right now, and hope for a perfect life with Him in heaven forever.

RELIGION BRIEF

Alaska Airlines retiring meal tray prayer cards

SEATTLE (AP) — After 30 years of giving passengers spiritual words to reflect on while they eat their meals, Alaska Airlines is retiring the prayer cards from meal trays. Airline spokeswoman Bobbie Egan says the decision was made after hearing from customers who preferred not to mix religion with transportation.

She says the cards began as a marketing ploy to differentiate the regional airline from its competitors. The cards offer a rotating message of different psalms from the Old Testament.

For a long time, Alaska Airlines got more positive comments than negatives ones. But lately, opinion has shifted.

Egan says the decision was made out of respect for all of their customers.

The airline sent an email to its frequent flyers on Wednesday explaining the change that will take effect Feb. 1.

DEVOTIONAL PAGE

These Devotional Pages are brought to you by these businesses who encourage all of us to attend worship services.

Proverbs 16:11: A just weight and balance are the LORD'S; all the weights of the bag are his work.

Should a Quarter Pounder weigh four ounces? Should a gallon of milk contain 128 fluid ounces? How about a gallon of gasoline? Do your answers change based on whether you are buying or selling? The great God of heaven expects total honesty in all transactions. Should the medicine you receive at a hospital be 100%, or 99%, pure? Could it make a difference? How about settings and accuracy of diagnostic equipment? Do you want your father to have a perfect MRI? How about someone else's father?

Do you feel strongly about these questions? Who says that measurements are important? And who is going to do anything about it, if measurements are not made properly? More than $6 trillion worth of economic transactions take place in the United States each year based on measuring devices. Just a 1% error could amount to over $60 billion, greater than the annual budget of many nations.

A typical convenience store sells 100,000 gallons of gasoline a month. If the owner adjusts his pumps to 127 fluid ounces per gallon, which you could not detect even with measuring cups, he could pocket an extra $2,400 per month. Who would know? The LORD JEHOVAH knows. He ordained just weights and measurements; He commands them; and He enforces them (Lev 19:35-36; Deut 25:13-15; Ezek 45:10). One of Israel's sins before being destroyed as a nation was deceitful merchant practices with false balances and weights (Hosea 12:7; Amos 8:5; Micah 6:11).

God will judge those nations or men who alter weights or measures for gain, because that is an abomination to Him; but He delights in their right use (11:1; 20:10,23). Honesty and accuracy in economic transactions did not originate with man; they are from the LORD. The laws of the nation of Israel in 1500 B.C. were the envy of the world (Deut 4:5-9). This proverb helps define the eighth commandment; thou shalt not steal (Ex 20:15). For people cut corners in many ways to steal from others, and the LORD condemns them all in order to establish property rights, economic confidence, and professional integrity.

Do you steal on the job by pilfering, pilfering, or small thefts (Tit 2:10)? Do you coast through jobs, cut corners from job specs, stretch breaks, or pad the time card? Do you pace yourself and make jobs take longer than they should? Should a windshield be installed perfectly, or almost perfectly? Should a sandwich be made according to the company's precise menu specifications? Or is close good enough?

Do you always pay a fair price? When you detect an error in a transaction, do you point it out, even if it costs you more? Do you return extra change from a transaction? You will never get ahead being stingy or tight in your financial dealings (11:24-26; 19:17; 28:8). This is a mark of profane men and why the poor get poorer and the rich get richer.

How should a Christian conduct himself in this world? Always exceed the expectations of those trusting you, on both the selling and buying sides and in all other economic transactions and professional relationships. You will always come out ahead, for promotion comes from the Lord (Ps 75:6-7). You will grow in favor with God and men. Accurate, honest, and liberal conduct is living testimony of the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and will cause others to ask a reason of your hope (Matt 5:16; 1 Pet 2:12; 3:15).

Notice To Our Advertisers

Counterfeit or fake checks are being used in a growing number of fraudulent schemes. Check overpayment scams target consumers selling cars or other valuable items through classified ads or online auction sites. Unsuspecting sellers get stuck when scammers pass off bogus cashiers checks, corporate checks, or personal checks. If you're selling something, don't accept a check for more than the selling price, no matter how tempting the offer or how convincing the story, especially if it is from an out of town buyer. Ask the buyer to write the check for the correct amount. If the buyer refuses to send the correct amount, return the check. Don't send the merchandise. If you think you've been targeted by a counterfeit check scam, report it to the Federal Trade Commission. Visit www.ftc.gov or call 1-877-FTC-HELP (1-877-382-4357) for more details or to report suspected fraud. This is a public service announcement brought to you by this newspaper.

Notice: New Free Ad Policy

The following are our Free Ad guidelines: Free ads will be limited to three (3) free ads per household per calendar month and are offered only for items that have been purchased for personal use and are no longer needed. Free ads are not available for homemade or home grown items, produce, pets or livestock, transportation or services offered. Ads submitted to our office on a free ad coupon (original coupon only, no photocopies) are limited to asking price of $100 or less. Ads submitted online at www.clickforads.com or www.kentuckynewera.com are limited to asking price that is $1000 or less. Both offers are limited to one item per ad and asking price must be included in ad. Free ads are run on a space available basis; we cannot guarantee a specific start date. Customer may cancel as soon as item sells. Free ad offer is for private party customers only, no business ads accepted.

Heloise Hint

Have to clean a lot of window blinds? Try this: Reuse your fabric-softener sheets to do the job. They will lift up the dirt and dust and leave a nice scent behind. Then you can toss them.

SATURDAY, JAN. 28, 2012 HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

This year avoid power plays and conflicts. You often could be disappointed by others' reactions. Learn not to rely on this type of feedback. You have the ability to be spontaneous, quick-witted and dynamic. Don't allow others to stop you. If you are single, you could be attracted to someone who is not emotional available. Look within to decide if this is a repeating pattern. If you are attached, the two of you need to agree to disagree. Make different opinions an asset to creating better ideas. ARIES knows how to help you out of the doldrums. A baby born today has a Sun in Aquarius and a Moon in Aries.

SATURDAY'S HOROSCOPE

JACQUELINE BIGAR

SUNDAY, JAN. 29, 2012 HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

You seem more than willing to make adjustments this year. On the other hand, many doors could close when you give up being a risk-taker. Think carefully. If you are single, you could meet your next sweetie just by going to the cleaners! If you are attached, don't take your sweetie as part of the landscape, or you could become the landscape. Do what is needed to preserve the excitement between you. TAURUS can be a stick in the mud. A baby born today has a Sun in Aquarius and a Moon in Aries if born before 10: 28 a.m. (PST). Afterward, the Moon will be in Taurus.

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE

JACQUELINE BIGAR

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★

Your ability to energize and get going marks your decisions. Others naturally want to go off with you on an adventure. Make choices that suit you. A friend comes up with an exciting idea, which you will pounce on. Tonight: The world is your oyster.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★

Take some time off from the grueling pace. Though it might not be OK in your mind to cancel or change plans, someone else does it with ease. A certain amount of upset surrounds this situation. Stop rather than react. Tonight: Take it slow and easy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★

Your ability to lighten up a situation takes over. An awkward moment is avoided because of your finesse. A friend plays an instrumental role in what occurs. Tonight: You are the party!

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★

Your skill and ability to get past an immediate snafu helps clear the way for a very important event or happening. You will assume the lead. Note what your sense of responsibility might be creating in your life. Check in with an older parent or friend. Tonight: The lead actor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★

You might have difficulty coming to terms with an associate or friend. This person might have done a total reversal, causing a problem when you least expected it. Be smart and let go; let it be the other person's issue. Tonight: Try a movie or listen to jazz.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★

You might want to look at a situation with new eyes. What you are hearing could surprise even you. A partner could do something so stunning that you have to catch your breath. A child or loved one could be complicating matters. Tonight: Follow another person's lead.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★

You might not be sure of yourself. If you have an opportunity to clear out a problem with a family member, please do. Touch base with a friend, and make plans to meet halfway, if not today, then soon. Tonight: Surround yourself with music.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★

Clearly a little exercise hurts no one, and you could gain from making it more of a habit. Choose an activity that works with your daily life. You might not be sure which way to go with a project or a key matter. Tonight: Don't read more into someone's mood than exists.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★

What you see occurring could surprise you. Rather than stand back, be willing to take a risk. You could have a ball. Use special care when dealing with your finances. A mistake could cause a big problem. Tonight: Where the fun lies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★

You might want to grab an opportunity and move on it. If you do, you might disappoint various people. Think about what you are doing before you leap into action. Others might be very challenging and disagreeable. Tonight: For now, stay close to home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★

Catch up with a close relative. He or she might have some fun news. A neighbor also might want to talk. Clear out these conversations before you make plans, as they could impact your choices. Maintain your sense of humor with others. Tonight: Join a friend for dinner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★

Extremes could be costly in more than the obvious way. A friend does a very strange turnabout, forcing you to look at a situation differently. He or she pressures you to agree with him or her. Give yourself space to think and decide. Tonight: Accept an invitation out.
